MILL MAN SLAIN BY HIGHWAYMEN

Frederick R. Dawson of Saxonville Believed to Have Been Slain By Highwaymen.

Special to the Boston American.

SAXONVILLE, Sept. 30.—That Frederick R. Dawson was held up by three highwaymen, shot and beaten to death in the desperate struggle he made for his life, and then dragged through the woods from the main road in front of the East Sudbury School a quarter of a mile to the bridge over Landham Brook, is now the belief of the police who, under Chief Sullivan of South Framingham, are this afternoon investigating the mystery.

Chief of Police Sullivan declares that the position of the dead body of the wealthy superintendent of the great Saxonville mills as it lay doubled up imbedded in the mud of the brook in less than two feet of water; the finding of the man's watch chain around one wrist, the watch being grasped in his hand; the bruises on his face and head from which blood had flowed, and other signs of a struggle, convincingly point to murder.

Three Suspects Seen.

The chief has found that three suspicious looking men, tall and dark and swarthy, have haunted the locality for more than a week and that they were seen in that district early yesterday morning.

Mrs. Ida Pratt, who lives opposite the East Sudbury school house, heard two shots fired last evening at 7:05 o'clock. She thinks that they were fired from the back or side of the schoolhouse.

The police believe that Superintendent Dawson, who left his home at 6:10 yesterday evening driving a horse and buggy and alone, must have reached the schoolhouse just about the time the shots were fired. They are now trying to locate the suspicious strangers, who have been here for more than a week, but who are now significantly missing.

Mr. Dawson carried no firearms. No revolver was found near his body, not at the spot in the road where the shots were heard. Another significant thing is that the wheel marks of Dawson's buggy were traced in the road as far as the schoolhouse and there lost.

Desperate Fight for Life.

Dawson's hat was found in bushes about ten feet from the side of the brook where his body was found, indicating that he might have engaged in another desperate struggle just as the bandits dragged him from the underbrush to hurl him into the brook from the little stone bridge.

Dawson was familiar with the locality where his body was found to-day by the army of searchers who had turned out when the fire whistles sounded the alarm.

His body was discovered in two feet of water in the mud under the south side of the middle arch of the little bridge. On the other side, the north of the bridge, the water is more than twenty feet deep, and had Dawson committed suicide by drowning he would have chosen that side. The body could not have floated down to where it was found from the deep pool, as the water is too shoal to carry it.

Miss Grace G. Davis, the school teacher at the East Sudbury school, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter: "I have seen three dark, foreign-looking men hanging around the schoolhouse for a week. I remember how tall and forbidding-looking they were. They frightened me and I kept away from the woods where I love to wander. I kept the children away, too.

"In the evenings when I left the school I often heard loud voices in the woods just back of the school. I don't know whether they were in the schoolhouse last night or not. Neighbors say they saw lights moving around here after 7 o'clock, and that they seemed to be in the schoolhouse. One window was open this morning, so the men might have been here."

William Gardner, a florist whose home is on a hill almost opposite the place where Mr. Dawson's body was found, said: "I saw three men coming down the railroad track about 5 o'clock yesterday morning. They were coming from the direction of Wayland. One was very tall, much taller than the two others.

"At the East Sudbury railroad station the men separated. The tall man went toward Saxonville and the others continued on this way toward South Sudbury.

"I believe they were the same mysterious men who have been hanging around here for a week and more and around the East Sudbury school. Last night I left my store in Saxonville at 6:10, just about the hour Mr. Dawson left his home for his drive on the same road. His home is nearer Landham bridge than my store is. However, I did not meet Mr. Dawson on the road, and saw no traces of him."

Treasurer Wood of the Saxonville Mills was here to-day from Boston. He does not think the suicide theory tenable. Yesterday afternoon the vice-president of the mills was here from Boston for a long consultation with Mr. Dawson.

Scoff at Suicide Theory.

Neither official saw the least sign of their superintendent's being mentally altered in the slightest. They say he had no reason for self-violence.

Medical Examiner Palmer is to hold an autopsy on the body this afternoon at Smith's undertaking rooms in South Framingham.

The body was found in Larnum's Brook at 9:30 to-day by members of the searching party, numbering more than 500 men, who had been out all night looking for him.

His hat was found by the side of the brook, which is very deep at the point where the body was discovered. He had gone nearly five miles from his home.

He had left his home in Elm street at 6 o'clock last night for a drive in a one-horse carriage. An hour later his horse dashed madly into the barn, covered with foam, bearing every evidence of terror and a long run.

The fire alarm was sounded at 1 o'clock this morning and called the hundreds of citizens to engage in the search. At daylight they determined to drag the waters of Norton's pond, fearing that Mr. Dawson had been murdered and his body thrown into the pond to conceal the crime.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, Sept. 30.—It was the final match of the season on the old field and the Doves were anxious to wind it up in a blaze of glory for themselves by taking the Superbas into camp for the third successive time.

The weather conditions were a bit footballish, but not enough to dampen the spirits of all the old regulars, who wanted to give the team a good sendoff before it descended on the Giants next week to spoil them for the pennant.

The players got into the feeling of the contest and went after Patsy Donovan's crowd from the outset, but found some tough opposition, as the Brooklyn team was after one win out of the bunch and put forth every effort to turn the trick.

CHESTNUTS CURE MAYOR

Carrying horse chestnuts in one's pockets is a sure cure for rheumatism. Mayor Hibbard says so.

The Mayor came to City Hall to-day with a painful rheumatic twinge in his limbs. Edward McHugh, the aged policeman, who guards the entrance to the Mayor's office, noticed it as soon as His Honor stepped out of the elevator.

He told the Mayor about the cure. Billy Boudrot, the Mayor's secretary, communicated with the park department by telephone. A batch of fifty of the fruit arrived at City Hall a half hour later.

Before noon the rheumatic twinge had disappeared.

WILL BUILD 50 WRIGHT CRAFT

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—Wilbur Wright, the American aeronaut, to-day gave his sanction to Lazare Weiller to have a French manufactory turn out fifty aeroplanes modelled after the Wright machine. This is convincing proof of the implicit confidence which the French aviators have in the construction of the American's aerial car. Mr. Wright is taking a deep interest in the manufacture of these machines.

LAD STOLE GOODS TO VISIT OLD HOME

Declaring that he had stolen money and clothing from his landlady, Emily C. Knight of No. 41 Rutland street, because he was homesick and desperate and wanted to go back to old England, Harry Payne to-day awaits arraignment in the Municipal Criminal Court. Payne, when arrested as he was boarding the Cunard freighter Sylvania, admitted the thefts.

CASTRO REFUSES TO RECEIVE NOTE

WILLEMSTAD, Curacoa, Sept. 30.—It is reported here from Venezuela that President [illegible] has refused to receive from Baron [illegible]erff, the German Minister at Caracas, [illegible] second note of the Netherlands government on the difficulties between that country and Venezuela.

BRYAN SPEECH HITS PRESIDENT

MUSCATINE, Ia., Sept. 30.—W. J. Bryan, in a series of speeches, delivered while traveling through Iowa to-day, bitterly attacked President Roosevelt for his attitude in the present campaign. Bryan's attack followed closely the lines laid down in his open letter to the President, made public last night. He declared his attempt to "name his own successor" would be resented by the electors of the country, who know enough to put the man they want in the White House.

Bryan's reception in the Mississippi River towns to-day was one of the best he has so far received. He spoke to-day in Muscatine, Letts, Columbus Junction, Oskaloosa and Washington.

NOMINATIONS BY GOV. GUILD

Secretary Frank L. Dean, for Governor Guild, to-day announced the following nominations sent to the Executive Council for confirmation, and laid over for one week, according to law:

Thomas L. Creeley of Belmont, for trustee of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, to succeed the late Warren W. Rawson.

William N. Cowles of Ayer, as medical examiner in the Tenth Middlesex District, to succeed Walter J. Skeepr, deceased. He has been assistant medical examiner.

Peter J. McCormick of Cambridge, member of the Board of Registration in Pharmacy.

Thomas H. Reilly of Westboro, member of the Board of Registration in Embalming.

William M. Rogers of Methuen, as trial justice in Essex County.

OCTOGENARIAN IS KILLED BY TRAIN

Charles J. Wentworth, eighty years old, residing on Farnsworth street, Waltham, was struck by an inbound Boston train on the Central Massachusetts branch of the Boston & Maine early to-day, while crossing the track in the vicinity of the Lyman street, Waltham, crossing, and was instantly killed.

SHOE WORKERS GET $12,277 BACK WAGES

Douglas Company of Brockton Complies With Ruling of Arbitration Board.

Special to the Boston American.

BROCKTON, Sept. 30.—The William L. Douglas Shoe Company to-day announced that it would pay $12,277.16 back wages due under the decision of the State Board of Arbitration. The decision was rendered by the board after months of controversy, and as a result the money will be paid to the local unions and distributed among some 1,400 shoe workers.

The trouble arose over the transfer of work from Factory No. 1 to Factory No. 2. Under the transfer the shoe company cut the wage scale on $3.50 shoes to that paid for the $3 product, at the same time asking only the same grade of work as demanded for the lower priced product. The unions protested, and after several meetings before a joint committee, which failed to bring a settlement, the matter was turned over to the State Board of Arbitration.

TAFT INVADES BRYAN'S HOME

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 30.—Invading the very heart of the enemy's country, William Howard Taft arrived in Lincoln late this afternoon, and was greeted in a manner most enthusiastic. Neighbors of Mr. Bryan crowded about the railroad station and followed the automobile which carried Mr. Taft to his hotel while they cheered and shouted.

In a sense the political aspect of Mr. Taft's visit was overlooked. The fact that a presidential aspirant is in town and the fact that his adversary is rushing toward here, scheduled to arrive to-morrow morning, is sufficient to make anycity go wild.

FIRST LECTURE BY DR. CRAPSEY

The first in the series of lectures on "The Moral and Religious Aspect of Political Parties," by the Rev. Dr. Algernon S. Crapsey, is to be delivered to-morrow night in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple. The subject of the first lecture of the course, which is eagerly looked forward to, is on "Republicans." Already the advance sale of tickets for the course bespeaks the interest taken in Dr. Crapsey's discussion of political conditions as they exist to-day in the United States.

ENGINEER SCALDED TO DEATH BY STEAM

BARRE, Vt., Sept. 30.—James Nute, aged fifty-five, an engineer at the Jones Brothers' granite works here, was fatally injured by the bursting of a throttle valve on an air compressor which he was repairing. The escaping steam scalded him terribly, and he died in about two hours without regaining consciousness. He was a resident of Barre and leaves a widow and several children.

THE STADIUM, SOLDIERS FIELD, Sept. 30.—With two second string men, Harding and Vogel, at left end and fullback respectively, in place of Houston and Kennard, Harvard trotted onto the gridiron to-day with considerable doubt as to the outcome of its first preliminary game of the season with Bowdoin.

The score of 28 to 0 which Bowdoin rolled up against the strong Fort McKinley team the week previous also did not make matters look bright for Harvard. The fact that Harvard just managed to defeat the Brunswick boys by a score of 5 to 0 last year did not increase the Crimson's comfort, for the Pine Tree State college brought along four veterans, Captain McDade, Newman, Wandtke and Gastonguay.

The change in the temperature to cool crisp, Autumn weather made ideal foot ball conditions. Both teams were keyed up to their highest tension, and not a sign of hot weather fag showed in either line-up. The Crimson line was the heaviest, but the Bowdoin boys seemed more aggressive.

A lusty-lunged aggregation of Bowdoin rooters touched up the dull concrete of the Stadium with their colors and made it echo with songs and yells. The attendance at the opening game was good, and all the Crimson coaches were on the side-lines closely watching their charges.

Houston did not play on acount of water on the knee, and Vogel was put into Kennard's place at fullback to give him a try-out. Both teams ambled onto the field for a preliminary line-up and charge.

DEMOCRATS GATHER FOR STATE CONVENTION

The remnant of the Democratic party in Massachusetts gathers to-night at the Quincy House for their "night before" demonstration, and the leaders will then endeavor to formulate some definite plan of action for to-morrow's State convention in Faneuil Hall.

This afternoon at the State street headquarters of the State Committee, James W. Synan of Pittsfield was in conference with the district leaders from all parts of the State.

Asked who would be nominated for Governor, the chairman admitted that he did not know.

"There is nothing to be said definitely as yet," he said to an AMERICAN reporter. "Everything is up in the air now, but we shall try to get down to business this afternoon."

It looks to-day like a "canned" convention to-morrow. Nobody but Senator James H. Vahey of Watertown can be persuaded to look at the Democratic nomination. Vahey wants it and he will get it. John Golden of Fall River is predicted as the nominee for second place.

A number of candidates for Governor have been suggested by their friends in a faint-hearted manner, but their booms are not taken seriously.

BIG OUTLAW BAND THREATENS TOWN

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 30.—Commonwealth's Attorney Hubbard and Sheriff Williams left Arvonia to-day with an armed force to aid in tracking down the Thomas-Zimmerman gang of 100 outlaws, now in hiding in the fastnesses between the James and Slater Rivers, and who, after shooting N. W. Gregory and threatening to burn the town of Arvonia and lynch the citizens, are prepared to resist arrest. The outlaws have carefully fortified their position, and are awaiting the attack of the armed citizens.

[illegible] DAY OF BASEBALL VOTING CONTEST---Coupon on Page 2

NEW SUSPECT IN COPELAND CASE IS HELD

Man Believed to Have Criminal Record in Three States in Police Custody.

IS GIVEN THIRD DEGREE

A man who gave the name of Louis D. Warden, but whose right name the police believe to be Samuel Rollins, is being held at Boston police headquarters in Pemberton square, awaiting examination by the members of the State and Mansfield police forces. Warden, or Rollins, is being held on suspicion of being connected with the murder of Florence Copeland at Mansfield several weeks ago.

The man held under suspicion was captured by Patrolman Cullen of the West Roxbury station Saturday night in Forest Hills square. He was arraigned in court Monday on the charge of drunkenness, but his case was continued until to-day to give the police a chance to look up his record. To-day before Judge Perrins, the charge of drunkenness was placed on file and the prisoner was taken to police headquarters for examination by the Mansfield authorities.

Warden's actions aroused the suspicions of Patrolman Cullen when he learned that he came from Providence through Mansfield. Warren talked loudly and boasted freely of his ability as a marksman. It was also learned that on his arrival in Forest Hills square he exhibited a revolver freely.

From investigations made by the police it was found that Warden, or Rollins, had a criminal record in Ohio, Rhode Island and Pennsylvania. In Ohio he served three terms in the State penitentiary on charges of burglary and larceny.

HUNDREDS OF WOMEN VIEW LATEST GOWNS

Hundreds of enthusiastic women were entertained yesterday at an unusual and original display when two handsome New York models, arrayed in the latest imported and domestic creations, paraded up and down the beautiful cloak room of the Shepard Norwell Company. Round after round of applause greeted the models each time they appeared in a different costume, and the women, one and all, were especially pleased at the efforts of the company in thus showing the season's latest effects in such a pleasing manner.

The gowns, suits and coats were all from the exclusive stock of the company and combined all the most desirable colors and materials of the season.

The show windows are also sources of delight to the many patrons who attend the annual opening. In them are selected gowns, wraps and accessories which give only a hint of the large stock within.

Gorgeously trimmed hats are additional features of this splendid exhibit. They are for the most part the extremely large elaborately trimmed models, with lines varying from the truly Parisian flat effects to the extremely high crowns. Some of the beaver models occasioned marked comment, and these were trimmed with huge wings and quantities of ribbons and silks.

Taup, canard and the different shades of brown are easily the favorite colors and uncurled plumes, together with the graceful willow plume, are leaders. Buckles play a prominent part in this year's millinery and hardly a hat is complete without some strikingly effective buckle, the colors of which tone admirably with the general color scheme.

An entire room, leading directly from the main millinery showrooms, is reserved for children and misses, and here are displayed many very fetching hats and bonnets for little children and young girls. Like those of the older women, the misses' hats are very large, the big floppy flat hat being most seen. Beaver models are very youthful and popular and ribbons are largely used.

POSED AS DETECTIVE.

MANSFIELD, Sept. 30.—Edward Bruce of this town is under arrest in North Attleboro, charged with disturbance. According to the story told there, he had entered the home of a young woman near Falls Village and informed her he was a detective, adding that she would have to accompany him. His mental condition will be inquired into.

PROCTER & GAMBLE P&G NAPHTHA SOAP

An Interesting Experiment

It will enable you to determine the value of P. & G. Naphtha Soap. Try it!

Make a strong suds of P. & G. Naphtha Soap and cold or lukewarm water.

Put into this all the dirty dish-cloths you have. Let them soak for an hour. If any dirt spots remain, rub them lightly with the soap. Remove the cloths. Rinse them in clear water. Hang them up to dry.

Look at them an hour later. They are as clean as when new—free from grease and without odor of any kind.

The point of this little experiment is this: If P. & G. Naphtha Soap will clean dirty dish-cloths quickly, easily and thoroughly, how much more quickly and easily will it clean bed-linen, table-cloths, pillow-cases, skirts, shirt waists and articles of a similar nature which are not, and never were, one-tenth as dirty as the dish-cloths?

5 cents a cake worth more.

Burglar in Police Custody Suspected in Copeland Crime

Snapshot taken to-day by BOSTON AMERICAN photographer of Louis D. Warden, alias Samuel Rollins, who confesses jail terms for burglary in three States, and who is being "grilled" by officers investigating Mansfield woman's murder.

MOTHER'S PLEA TO ELKINS TO SAVE DAUGHTER

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Louise Lonsdale, who is suing Blaine Elkins in the West Virginia courts for $100,000 damages for alleged breach of promise, did not make her whereabouts known yesterday to her lawyers, Alfred and Jesse E. Epstein, who have not heard from her since she disappeared on Saturday from the Caledonia, No. 28 West Twenty-sixth street.

"As for our compensation in attempting to negotiate a settlement, which the Elkins family, through their lawyers, did not see fit to make, we have a lien against that pile of most interesting reading," said Jesse Epstein, pointing to a stack of some 200 telegrams and 300 letters that concern the relations of Blaine Elkins and his brother Richard with Louise Lonsdale and her sister.

"If you could read the letters this poor girl's mother wrote to these young men before she died you would see why we were moved to take her case. The mother was begging the Elkins boys to leave her daughters alone."

Mrs. Lonsdale's correspondence indicates that their Memphis home had been open to the Elkins boys and that the mother at first thought highly of them.

DR. LOWELL TALKS ON ESPERANTO

Dr. D. O. S. Lowell, one of the most eminent authorities on the matter, gave a lecture on Esperanto, the universal language, at the Dorchester Temple Baptist Church, Welles avenue and Washington street, last night. That the language was not something exclusively for the use of students in school, and that it was not to be lost when those who make a study of it have left the institution wherein they acquired it, was the main point brought out by the speaker.

MOTHER SEES FENDER SAVE BOY UNDER CAR

Little Johnny Powers, four years old and an exceptionally pretty child, with long golden curls, had a narrow escape from being crushed to death to-day under a trolley car. His agonized mother, helpless to aid her boy, watched him in the moment of peril from a window in her home, at No. 1530 Cambridge street, until she fainted. Johnny's life was saved by the new scoop fender with which the Boston Elevated is equipping cars. It is like a fisherman's landing net.

Dressed in a Russian suit, with a little red jacket, Johnny was crossing the street when a car bound for the subway in Boston came flying down the street. The motorman clanged his gong and Mrs. Powers screamed a warning. The noise confused the little boy. He fell on the track in front of the car, and spectators held their breath in horror. Mrs. Powers lost consciousness at the sight of her child's frightful plight, but the motorman kept his nerve, and, applying the brakes, pressed the button which drops the scoop fender. The net picked up the child, and he escaped with a broken nose and bruises. When the motorman raised the child in his strong arms the little fellow still clutched the long stick of candy he had crossed the street to buy.

TURTLE CAUGHT DUCKS.

TAUNTON, Sept. 30.—For some time past ducks have been missing on the farm of Harry Duy, and it was noted that the birds were last seen about the edge of a certain pond before they disappeared. A watch was set, and while a duck was making its way along the edge of the pond the guard saw an enormous mud turtle emerge from the water and seize the duck by the leg. The turtle was so large that a bushel basket was not big enough to hold it.

KOCH PRAISES FIGHT IN N. Y. ON TUBERCULOSIS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—That the city of New York leads the world in the fight of the municipalities against tuberculosis was the declaration made by Dr. Robert Koch, the specialist, to-day at the International Tuberculosis Congress.

Admitting that the city led his own country in the strictness of the measures it had adopted, the discoverer of the tubercle bacillus paid a high tribute to the work that is being done there by the municipal medical authorities, especially by Herman Biggs, the general medical officer of the department of health.

Describes War in New York.

Professor Koch's complimentary speech followed a paper by Dr. Biggs, showing what measures were being taken in New York to eradicate the white plague.

The measures adopted by the city of New York in making removal compulsory in cases where it was deemed necessary to prevent contagion of persons living in the same houses or rooms, were given high praise by Dr. Koch, who said he wished such a rule could be adopted in his native country.

"I wish to express my admiration for the work that the city of New York is doing to stamp out tuberculosis," he said. "Especially do I wish to compliment the city authorities on their forcible removal of tuberculosis cases from homes.

Unequalled in World.

"The organization which they have there, and which Dr. Biggs has so well described to you, is unequalled, I believe, in the world. Such measures, though, I do not think should be exercised in many instances.

"I hope the time will come in the not far distant future when the fine example of the city of New York can be adopted in my country, especially regarding compulsory register and forcible removal."

The entire quota of sections were in full blast to-day, while the corridors of the exhibition rooms were filled with delegates and visitors.

GIVES MORE TIME TO GET MONEY ORDERS

Under new orders from Postmaster Mansfield, hereafter the general postoffice will be open for the transaction of money order business twenty-four hours a day. The sixty-one sub-stations will be open for money order business so long as they remain open for general postal business. This gives the public two additional hours at the sub-stations and sixteen at the central office.

HUB LAWYER WILLS $50,000 TO ACADEMY

SALEM, Sept. 30.—By the will of John F. Kilton, for forty years a Boston lawyer, who died in this city August 9, his entire $50,000 estate will go upon the death of his eighty-year-old sister, Mrs. C. D. White of Boston, to Kimball Union Academy of Meriden, N. H., one of the oldest institutions of its kind in New England, which greatly needs the money.

SIX VESSELS LOST ON GREAT LAKES

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 30.—The gale which swept the Great Lakes yesterday was responsible for the loss of at least six vessels. Besides one was burned. The most serious of the disasters probably is that of the steamer Wolverine, long overdue at Selkirk. She had aboard twenty-five sailors and passengers

GIRL MARRIES FIANCE AS HE NEARS DEATH

Lying upon what the physicians at the Somerville Hospital fear will be his death bed, with hardly enough strength to make the responses, Walter Scott Sawyer to-day was married to Ella Page Adams, daughter of Charles Follen Adams, the author.

The wedding was to have occurred this evening at the home of the bride, No. 59 Waverly street, Roxbury, and would have been a notable social event, but last week Mr. Sawyer was stricken with appendicitis, was taken to the Somerville Hospital Friday, operated upon Saturday, and since then has been in a critical condition.

When it was known last week that Mr. Sawyer was so ill, the wedding invitations were withdrawn and the date of the marriage postponed, pending his expected recovery. To-day the fiance, Miss Adams, decided that if her lover must die, it would be with the consolation that she was his wedded wife. The groom agreed, and so a ceremony, which was marked with deepest solemnity, was performed at the hospital by Rev. William H. Pierson, pastor of the First Unitarian Church of Somerville. Mr. and Mrs. Adams, parents of the bride, were present. Relatives of the groom were also at his bedside.

While there is a chance that Mr. Sawyer may recover, it is said to be so small that practically everybody considers the ceremony a death bed marriage. The bride until recently was assistant librarian at Harvard College. She is a charming woman and has the sympathy of a wide circle of friends in her present position of anxiety and distress. Both she and Mr. Sawyer are members of the Appalachian Mountain Club.

CONVENTION OF BANKERS OPENED TODAY

DENVER, Col., Sept. 30.—The annual convention of the American Bankers' Association was formally opened to-day. While there were sessions on Monday and Tuesday, the real work of the association did not start until this morning.

The program for to-day held some very interesting material for the 8,000 delegates who were present. Addresses were delivered by Governor Henry A. Buchtel of Colorado, Mayor Robert W. Speer of Denver and Colonel J. D. Powers.

This afternoon President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton addressed the delegation on the topic of "The Banker and the Nation." B. E. Walter, president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce of Toronto, spoke, taking for his theme "Abnormal Features of American Banking." Great interest was attached to the speeches this afternoon.

11 SHIPS TRY TO PULL YANKEE OFF THE ROCKS

UNITED EFFORT BY TUGS AND OTHER CRAFT TO SAVE CRUISER AT HIGH TIDE.

NEW BEDFORD, Sept. 30.—Eleven colliers, tugs, torpedo boats and tenders and several lighters are to-day making a concerted effort to pull the United States cruiser Yankee off Spindle rock at the flood tide. Hawsers were attached to the stranded vessel and the powerful boats will make the pull at the same time, formed in four lines.

The sea has subsided and it is believed that the Yankee will be either pulled off or pulled to pieces.

The boats include the two navy colliers, three navy tugs, four torpedo boats and the torpedo tenders Hist and Nina. Several lighters of the Merritt-Chapman Wrecking Company are also assisting.

Wireless Out of Commission.

With the wireless service out of commission, no word has been received from the stranded cruiser Yankee since last night.

At that time only two lights were seen on the ship, which would tend to show that the cruiser was abandoned during the night. Mate Harold Bass of the United States lighthouse steamer Verbuna which passed the Yankee yesterday afternoon said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day

"We passed the Yankee at 4 p. m. yesterday. I noticed that she had settled considerably at the stern. Huge combers were breaking over her, and she appeared to be pounding heavily. I should say that the vessel was flooded and in a precarious condition."

The naval tug Chicasaw hurriedly left this port on receipt of orders from Newport. She proceeded at once to the scene of the disaster and is co-operating with the tugs and colliers in the effort to float the cruiser at high tide. To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter Captain Smith of the Chicasaw said:

Both Anchors Parted.

"We lay near the Yankee yesterday and the waves were so high that both our port and starboard anchors parted and we were obliged to seek shelter in this port. Waves were continually breaking over the Yankee completely submerging her. The ship is badly strained and her position becomes more perilous every hour. The planking of a coffer dam which was being built inside the ship have broken and floated away. The seas are so powerful that further work had to be abandoned."

ROBBERS BLOW P. O. SAFE FOR FIFTH TIME

PLYMOUTH, Sept. 30.—The North Plymouth postoffice was broken into early to-day by a gang of burglars, who blew open the safe, wrecking it and the office, and decamped with a large quantity of stamps and about $10.

Postmaster O. H. Kelly does not keep much money in the office, as it has been entered four times before and on two occasions the safe was blown.

The robbers are thought to have been three men noticed in North Plymouth late last evening and are believed to have traveled in an automobile. Entrance was made by forcing the front door with a jimmy. The knob of the combination was struck off with an axe, which, with an electric flashlight, was found on the floor this morning. Nitro-glycerine was poured in cracks closed with "soap" and the explosive fired without any attempt to muffle the sound, which was heard by people living nearby.

The postoffice clock stopped at 1:10 a. m. One of the watchmen of the Plymouth Cordage Company was at the end of the playground across the street from the postoffice just before 1 o'clock and heard the report.

YOUNG'S STACK AGAIN ABLAZE

Flames burst from the great iron stack at Young's Hotel shortly before 11 o'clock last night, causing an alarm from box 36. When the firemen arrived they had nothing to do but watch the flames, and explain to those gathered about the cause of the fire, also remarking that they had been summoned to the hotel many times before, when the soot in the stack caught fire as it did last night. District Chief Fox explained that the stack ran down to the kitchen of the hotel, its purpose being to carry off the odors and smoke. "The grease collected on the inside," he said, "caught fire and finally burned itself out."

SANDWICH MEAL CASE PUT ON FILE

The first of the thirty-four cases against hotel and restaurant keepers in Lowell for violations of the Sunday liquor law was placed on file in the Superior Court at East Cambridge by Judge Lawton to-day. The defendant was James F. Holden, proprietor of the Franklin House. Evidence in the thirty-four cases was secured by the Lowell Law and Order League. The contention of the government is that the serving of liquor with a sandwich does not come within the meaning of the statute.

MAN ESCAPES TWICE DURING POLICE CHASE

After twice making his escape, a young man who gave his name as Terrence McCarthy and his address as Brooklyn is locked up at the Lagrange street station charged with attempted larceny from the person of Mrs. Eva Rogers of Roxbury.

The young man, according to several witnesses, was standing near the corner of Washington and Eliot streets when their attention was attracted by the sound of coins falling to the sidewalk.

One of the men, John J. Ryan of No. 51 Centre street, Roxbury, seized McCarthy by the arm but he wriggled from his grasp and ran along Eliot street. It is alleged McCarthy pulled a revolver, from which the barrel had been removed, from his pocket and threatened to use it.

Patrolman Wilson of Division 4 overhauled McCarthy near Tremont street and took him to the station house.

When he was questioned by Lieutenant Canney, McCarthy said he lived in Detroit, but when he found that the lieutenant was familiar with that city, he changed his residence to Brooklyn.

WAR FLEET IN PORT FRIDAY

MANILA, Sept. 30.—Rear Admiral Sperry has notified Captain U. R. Harris commandant of the Cavite naval station by wireless, that the fleet will arrive on Friday afternoon.

The cholera is steadily decreasing here. Within the last forty-eight hours there have been twenty-six new cases and eight deaths.

PLAGUE SUSPECTS ALLOWED TO LAND

The Boston Board of Health is satisfied that none of the 308 steerage passengers of the White Star liner Canopic, detained last Monday at Galloups Island, is afflicted with the bubonic plague. The passengers were detained by Port Physician Carson for examination, as they all came from St. Michaels, the Azores, where the plague is now raging. The detained immigrants were all brought from the island this afternoon and landed at the White Star docks in Charlestown.

MOTHER OR $3,000,000 TO CHOOSE

Son of Mrs. Leslie Carter Is Given Alternative by His Father's Will.

STANDS BY HIS MOTHER

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Will young Leslie Dudley Carter, son of the late Leslie Carter, the Chicago millionaire, forsake his mother, the beautiful and celebrated actress, Mrs. Leslie-Carter Payne, for a generous share of the $3,000,000 left by his father?

When the will of Leslie Carter, who died last Friday, was read for the first time, it showed that the aged millionaire, true to his threat to disinherit his son because the latter remained loyal to his fascinating mother, has disinherited him conditionally.

The estate was left to Miss Helen Leslie Carter, a sister, and to Ernest Carter, a brother, of New York. The will reads:

"I leave nothing to my son, Leslie Dudley Carter, for the reason that he has left the home I maintained for him without cause or justification.

"So long as he remains under his mother's influence I do not desire either directly or indirectly to aid him. If he comes to understand the serious nature of his error and separate himself from his mother I do not object to my brother and sister, or either of them acting freely on his or her own judgment, treating him as I would gladly have done if he had been loyal and dutiful to me."

And these words penned by the former president of the South Side Elevated Railroad of Chicago on February 20, 1904, were final, for he never changed his will after it was signed.

Young Leslie Dudley Carter was at the deathbed of his father last week in Chicago, but the old millionaire never relented, even though the shades of the eternal night were closing about him. He bore his implacable hatred to his former wife to the grave.

"My son," said Mrs. Leslie Carter-Payne last night on being told the provisions of the will, "made his choice years ago and came to me. He knew what he was about and has never had occasion to regret that choice, but he will probably contest the will.

"Several months ago, upon receipt of news of the serious illness of Mr. Carter, my son went to the bedside of his father and remained there until the end. I expect him home soon."

"Will Mrs. Payne also contest the will?" the young actor-husband was asked to-day.

"She is Mrs. Payne now, not Mrs. Carter," was the significant reply.

But as the financial resources of the Carter-Paynes are not what they were before the talented actress broke with David Belasco it is believed here to-day that Leslie Dudley Carter will make a fierce legal battle for a share in his father's $3,000,000 estate.

Miss Helen Carter not long since had a conservator for her brother's wealth appointed on the ground that he was not competent to manage his vast fortune. Carter was declared to be insane, and for months before his death was under the constant care of watchers and nurses, so that even if his heart had relented to his son he could not have changed that will signed four years ago.

Under the provisions of the aged millionaire's will there need be no legal contest if the young man, whom rumor said at the time of his mother's sensational elopement and marriage with William L. Payne, the young actor, was to marry Miss Norma Munro, the heiress and sportswoman, but consents to leave his mother.

"There has never been any difference between my mother and myself," young Carter said years ago when the pretty woman left Carter. "There is none at this moment and there never will be. My mother has no more loyal friend than myself, and no woman in the world has ever stood higher in my esteem than she. No woman ever will."

Is this the way Leslie Dudley Carter feels to-day? Will he forsake his mother now for the millions of his father or will he remain true to her and take the uncertain chances of a long and expensive legal battle to break his father's will?

CRAZED YALE MAN RECOVERS

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Sept. 30.—After lying unconscious eight hours, Lee Gilbert Warren, the Yale halfback who suffered concussion of the brain after being kicked in the head, has recovered consciousness and is pronounced out of danger. Warren says that he will get into the game next week, protected by heavy headgear. He will be able to leave the college infirmary in two or three days.

The cure for the blues—Cascarets.
A million boxes go out every month to carry a world of sunshine.
Are you getting your share?

Cascarets act as a bowel tonic, not as an irritant.

They are vegetable. Their action is natural. Their effect is the same as the effect of some foods.

They are gentle; no griping.

They are pleasant; no dreading.

They are convenient; no waiting.

One old way was castor oil.

The effect was to grease the bowels, and for a single day. Oil never causes the bowel muscles to act.

Other ways were pills, salts and cathartics. The effect was the same as pepper has in the nostrils. They flooded the bowels with fluid.

Those fluids were digestive juices. And the waste today means a lack tomorrow.

We knew that the method was wrong. That the after-effects only weakened the bowels.

But we had no gentle laxatives in the old days. So we waited as long as we could, then took a big dose of physic.

The method today is to take one Cascaret at a time—just as soon as you need it. Then the bowels are always clean.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure you get the genuine, with CCC on every tablet. The price is 50c, 25c and

ILL, RISKS HER LIFE TO RESCUE OTHERS AT FIRE

Roxbury Girl Leaves Sick Bed to Sound Warning to the People in House.

The barking of a dog that roused its mistress from her slumber, and the latter's own activities, despite the fact that for the past six weeks she has been ill with appendicitis, saved a number of people from suffocation during the progress of a fire in the Roxbury district early to-day.

Agnes Smith, the twenty-two-year-old daughter of James Smith, is the young lady who gave the alarm.

There are two families living in the building at the corner of George and Magazine streets, Roxbury, while the lower floor of the building is occupied by a grocer named J. Sushman. The flames originated in the man's store.

Miss Smith was asleep in her room, and was awakened by the barking of her pet dog. Though in a weak condition, she lost no time in making her way into the hall, despite the rush of smoke, and called upon other members of the family, informing them that the house was on fire.

PLAYING WITH PISTOL; KILLS HIS FRIEND

Slayer and Two Companions Locked Up at Pawtucket for Tragedy.

Special to the Boston American.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Sept. 30.—John Lester Lyons was shot and instantly killed by a revolver in the hands of his friend, Joseph Prairie, in the Maple House here at 9 a. m. to-day.

After the killing young Prairie walked to the police station and surrendered himself. He said he was playing with the revolver when it went off accidentally and killed young Lyons.

Prairie, with his brother John and a John Kelley, who was also in the room at the time of the shooting, were locked up in the station till the killing can be investigated by the police.

The police have learned that the four young men were "fooling" in the room occupied by Prairie and his brother in the Central House, a boarding hotel. They are all friends. The killing was done with a revolver which has been kept in the dressing case in the room.

John Lyons, who was killed, was twenty years old. He lived with his widowed mother at No. 14 Cherry street, Pawtucket.

WIFE COACHES LAJOIE TO WIN AT THEIR HOME

Cleveland Mascot Cheers Larrupers to Victory in Fight for Pennant.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 30.—"Sometimes I'm nervous about going to the games. I'm so afraid I may prove a hoodoo. But do you know," and smiles chased the dimples over the face of Mrs. Napoleon Lajoie, wife of the manager of the Cleveland team, "the team never has lost a game when I was there rooting for a win?"

And Mrs. Lajoie, a fan of the first magnitude, put the proposition exactly right. She is the team's mascot. Not only is she a rooter who does things to help bring victory to her husband's club, but she plays the game right into the Lajoies' pretty home in Hough avenue, only a few blocks from League Park.

"You know, I never talk baseball at home here," she said, after describing her rooting, and laughing at the idea that she had helped put the Naps in the running for the coveted bunting.

"I believe in talking of other things, as far removed from the subject of baseball as possible. It takes Mr. Lajoie's mind off the game and the struggle, and he is refreshed by thinking of something else, too. For he doesn't just pretend to be interested in what I'm talking of. He's just the best husband imaginable. Isn't he a great ball player, though?" and she blushed at her own naive question.

"He's just as good a husband."

Mrs Lajoie takes her husband's mind off baseball at home and carries her work right to the gates of League Park, for she always brings the manager to the games in Cleveland, either in their electric runabout or their big touring car, rewards of Lajoie's ability and thrift.

TAFT EULOGY IN BRYAN SPEECH

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Norman E. Mack, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has grave doubts as to the efficiency of phonographs in aiding Mr. Bryan's election, as the result of a test of a batch of new records at Democratic headquarters in the Hoffman House yesterday.

Everything went all right until the operator placed a record urging every one to vote for Taft in the machine. Practically every one had stopped work to listen and applaud, when suddenly there was a wheezing rasping sound, and then came a eulogy of Taft. Doors began to slam in every direction, and there was a chorus of cries of "Throw it out!"

The operator, found leaning against the bar in the cafe, explained that a new office boy must have "mixed things up a bit."

Would You Forsake Your Mother for $3,000,000?

Leslie Carter, the Chicago millionaire, in his will disinherits his son, Leslie Dudley Carter, unless the young man leaves his mother, Mrs. Leslie Carter-Payne, the beautiful actress. If the young man forsakes his mother he will get a large share of the $3,000,000 left by his father.

What do the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN think about this?

What do you think of a father who would disinherit his son unless he left his mother?

What do you think Leslie Dudley Carter should do?

Would you leave your mother for $3,000,000?

SHOULD NOT FORSAKE HIS MOTHER FOR ANY PRICE

—REV. W. C. MINIFIE.

"No son could be justified in leaving his mother, if she be a good mother, for any earthly consideration," said Rev. William C. Minifie of the Clarendon Street Baptist Church to-day when approached in regard to his opinion on whether Leslie Dudley Carter should forsake his mother for the $3,000,000 estate forbidden him by his father's will unless he forever leaves his actress parent.

"There are things in this world that are worth more than money, and I would not leave my mother, were she alive, for $3,000,000 or $30,000,000.

"It seems to me that a true father would never impose such a condition in a will nor would he expect a son who was a true son to let any money consideration estrange him from his mother.

"I do not like the idea at all. It looks to me like an attempt to perpetuate a revenge of years' standing, even after death. He is the mother's only son, and has been with her since the separation. It seems all wrong to me that a father should even wish such a thing.

"On the face of things this action of Leslie Carter seems horribly mean. On the other hand, one cannot, of course, know what lies behind, what the skeleton in the closet is.

"Even if the father of the boy did continue to feel strongly against the mother, if his son follows the conditions of the will, the father willingly makes of him an unspeakable cad, and it does not seem to me that any true father, with the right and proper instincts for his son, would ever desire to estrange him from his mother. He practically tries to bribe him to stay away from the mother, and there is no gain to himself. He is dead and beyond the companionship of his son and still wants to keep the boy from his mother.

"The whole thing appears detestable, unfatherly, unmanly."

SAVED BOY'S LIFE; REWARD NOW AWARDED

Beause he saved little five-year-old Clyde Rafuse of Roxbury from drowning in the Charles River, James T. McCauley, formerly of South Boston, has been awarded the bronze medal for bravery and a money reward of $25 by the Massachusetts Humane Society. The medal and the money are to-day being sent to Mr. McCauley, who is now a machinist in Kansas City.

The heroic act was performed on June 17 last. McCauley, one of the best known young men of the peninsular district, was on a street car with a young woman friend. He heard shouts and saw a group of boys running along the embankment pointing to a dory and a boy struggling in the water.

McCauley saw one man plunge into the water and then swim again toward the shore. He leaped from the car, ran to the embankment and, shedding his coat, plunged into the water and reached the then-drowning child, having to dive twice for him before he seized him.

McCauley was by this time well exhausted himself, but with splendid grit he held the child high from the water and managed to swim to the shore, where saved and savior were dragged ashore by a hundred eager hands.

The little Rafuse boy and several others but a little older than himself had been playing in the dory, which in some manner was overturned. The other lads could all swim and soon saved themselves, leaving the child to drown. Nothing but the quick wit and splendid courage of McCauley could have saved the child from the water, and a great crowd of people and passengers in a long line of street cars on the bridge cheered him when he swam ashore with the child whose life he had saved at the risk of his own.

BIG BARGAINS IN SHOE VALUES

The Sheinwald Shoe Syndicate is offering at its store at Nos. 40 and 42 Summer street a stock of Luddy & Currier and other shoes which is attracting deserved attention from bargain seekers. This stock is of a quality which appeals to the discriminating at normal prices, but now that these shoes are being sold at half price, and in some instances at twenty-five cents on the dollar, it is not strange that there should be a rush to buy.

There is a whole carload of high-grade shoes for men, women and children on sale at the Sheinwald store. It is the remainder of the retail stock of well-known manufacturers, and the sale offers a rare opportunity for heads of families to buy footwear for themselves and children at prices not often quoted to the public. The shoes offered at this store are in every conceivable style now in vogue, and in some instances are being sold at less than the cost of manufacturing.

Besides shoes of the Luddy & Currier variety, there are big lines of the George Snow and Crockett makes. All three of these manufacturers turn out goods which stand high in the estimation of the trade. The shoes are made of good material with skill and care. They are comfortable, they look well, and they wear well.

SISTERS DIE IN FLAMES AS HOUSE BURNS

ROCKLAND, Me., Sept., 30.—Mrs. George Cook and Mrs. Kate Bailey, sisters, were burned to death in the former's home in Martinsville, St. George, early to-day.

The residence of Mrs. Bailey is believed to be in one of the suburbs of Boston.

The fate of the two occupants of the place was first revealed by the finding of the remains of their bodies in the ruins. The buildings in that section are widely separated and the few people who were attracted by the burning building saw no signs of the two sisters, and supposed they had gone to one of the neighbors for shelter.

Mrs. Cook was a widow and had no other relatives except Mrs. Bailey and the latter's daughter, who also lives in Massachusetts. The neighbors were able to give only meager information about Mrs. Bailey and her residence. They understood, however, that Mrs. Bailey's daughter was on her way to visit them, and preparations were being made for her arrival.

LODGE REPLIES TO OLNEY AND ATTACKS BRYAN

Says Democratic Candidate's Only Contribution to Politics Has Been Words.

In a statement replying to Richard Olney's letter in support of William Jennings Bryan, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge defends Roosevelt and his policies, declares that Taft on his record of what he has been and what he is should be elected President and calls Bryan a brilliant, popular orator whose only contribution to politics has been in words. Mr. Lodge [illegible] Mr. Olney's attack on Roosevelt sugg[illegible] that he has a personal grudge against t[illegible] President or has been stung by something that the President has said.

Senator Lodge declares that Mr. Olney's purpose is to defeat the Roosevelt policies by the election of Bryan. "Bryan's election," says Senator Lodge, "might in a way ultimately overthrow the Roosevelt policies, because, Mr. Bryan if we may trust his record and not his present ever-varying declarations, would push Mr. Roosevelt's policies to such an extent that they would break down and bring on probably a violent reaction. The disaster and ruin which this would entail would be too heavy a price for even conservatives like Mr. Olney to pay for bringing about the reaction which they desire. We therefore are forced to conclude that Mr. Olney urges Mr. Bryan's election because he thinks, as he professes to think, that Mr. Bryan would not carry out Mr. Roosevelt's policies, but would arrest them."

Of Bryan Senator Lodge says:

Mr. Bryan has been conspicuous before the country for the past twelve years. He has a large popular following in his own party. He has drawn to himself in his various campaigns considerable accessions from the ranks of the Populists and the Socialists. He is a brilliant and effective popular orator. He has done nothing. He has never demonstrated his capacity in action. His only contribution to our politics has been in words. He has advocated the free coinage of silver. In 1896 he stood upon a platform which made a direct attack upon the courts. He sustained that attack at the time and has never repudiated the revolutionary position then taken. He has advocated the government ownership of railroads, not only when he returned from Europe, but just one year ago in his newspaper, the Commoner. He has never recanted that doctrine. He is now advocating the guarantee of bank deposits, and promises to push the Roosevelt policies, to which Mr. Olney objects, to unheard of extremes. When he came before the country twelve years ago he was entirely untrained and appallingly ignorant of our history, our traditions and our laws. He has not been trained or tested by responsibility or by the necessity of action from that day to this. The policies which he has advocated are dangerous and destructive, and there is no reason to suppose that he would not carry them out. On this record, which is not a speculation as to what might be, but a plain statement of what has been and is, he ought not to be elected President of the United States.

He was rushed to the City Hospital, where he was placed on the dangerous list, and the doctors say he will probably die.

NEW CLEW TO MURDER FOUND IN MILLS CASE

BOTTLE MARKED "POISON" RECOVERED BY POLICE MAY AID IN SOLVING MYSTERY.

ROCHESTER, N. H., Sept. 30.—The finding to-day of a bottle marked "poison" furnishes the authorities with new proof that Jesse Mills was murdered and then thrown into the Salmon Falls river to conceal the real manner in which he came to his death.

His brothers declare that they will have the body exhumed and the contents of the stomach examined. A Boston detective is here to-day to begin work on the case. [illegible] bottle, which was found by a young [illegible], named Grenier, is to be sent to [illegible]tsmouth for investigation.

Their suspicion that Jesse Mills had been the victim of foul play being practically confirmed, the brothers to-day decided to employ a Boston detective to come here and fully investigate the case.

County Solicitor Dwight Hall of Dover, who has been busy at the Superior Court the past week, to-day declared that from now on he will bend every energy to the unraveling of the crime, and do everything in his power to bring the murderers of Jesse Mills to justice.

Given Drugged Liquor.

The theory of the brothers and others who have been working on the case is that the murder of Mills was deliberately planned by enemies, who met him in the cemetery here and who persuaded him to drink liquor which had been drugged. It is conjectured that the man was then led to the river bank and pushed into the water.

The bottle which contained the poison was to-day taken to Portsmouth, and the druggist who sold it will be asked to tell who bought it of him if he can remember.

The suicide opinion of Medical Referee Charles H. Moulton is not shared by two local physicians, who declare that Mills was practically dead when his body was thrown into the water.

The authorities to-day are trying to find the location of two marines who have been in this town at different times within the past year. Two young Rochester men also will be questioned when they are found, as the authorities think that they may help them unravel the mystery which surrounds the case.

Brothers Hold to Murder

Benjamin and George Mills to-day discussed the case freely with a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. Benjamin said:

"We both believe as positively as we can that our brother, Jesse, did not commit suicide. We believe that he was murdered and not for motives of robbery but of revenge or a desire to get him out of the way.

"Even if our brother did have certain troubles we never heard that he so much as intimated suicide. We think that some person or persons simply wanted to get him out of their way and to seal his mouth forever.

"We are working on the case all of the time now. Everything we learn we are investigating, and we will soon have the help of others more skilled in criminal investigation.

Wife Tells Story.

"We will carry this thing to the end. Had it been at all possible following the autopsy by Drs. Stokes and Bates we would have had the contents of the stomach examined by experts.

"That could not be, however, and now we are working toward the same end on other lines. Even now we will not rest, but may have the remains exhumed and another examination made and the services of an expert chemist retained."

That the officials are becoming more and more aroused the action of Chief of Police Charles H. Allen last night in subjecting the wife of the dead man, Mrs. Carrie Mills, and her two daughters, Avis and Effie, to a long and searching examination by the marshal and City Solicitor Samuel D. Felker proves. What the authorities learned they are keeping closely to themselves.

Mrs. Carrie Mills would not be interviewed by the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. She declared that she did not see why her name had been dragged into the case at all, and she was indignant that stories had been circulated in the town about her.

STORE CONFIDENCE

By Tom Carlton.

The confidence of the buying public in a mercantile establishment is everywhere recognized as the most valuable asset a store can have, yet there are many store proprietors who have little or no knowledge how to create it.

In the first place, confidence is a plant of slow growth, and therefore the sooner it is started the better. The foundation of it is knowledge. You can't expect a man to have much confidence in your goods and your prices and your professions until he knows something about them, personally; and he is not likely to know much about them, or, at any rate, the most important facts about them, unless you take pains to tell him. It doesn't make any difference whether he comes from Missouri or not; you have got "to show him."

Honest advertising, of a judicious character, is the beginning of store confidence. You cannot tell whether a man is truthful or not if he never opens his mouth to say a word. It is only when he begins to make statements to you that you have any standard to judge his truthfulness by.

If he comes to you every little while with a piece of information of personal interest and value to you, the next thing you do is to test his statements to find out whether or not they are true. If they prove to be always reliable you begin to trust him yourself and to express your opinion of him to your friends, and in time both you and they will have learned to put confidence in him and to rely on what he says.

The confidence of the buying public in a store is something that grows up in exactly the same way. It begins with a study of some claim or statement that the store makes—in other words, with investigation of the truthfulness of some advertisement. If this stands the test, other advertisements of the store will be scanned with greater care and more faith, and just as surely as sunrise a confidence will be created which not only holds the original customers year after year, but spreads from one to another as time passes.

Another thing to remember is this: Confidence, to be of value to a store, must be widespread and general. It is not enough that a few have faith in the advertising manager's statements. It is necessary that all be convinced. The importance of giving the widest possible publicity to the advertising is therefore apparent. Get circulation, get the ear of every possible customer and get it all the time. Then make only those statements that you can back up.

MRS. HAINS'S CONTEST FOR BABES DELAYED

Her Detailed Story of Life with Slayer-Husband Ready for Court.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Mrs. Claudia Libbey Hains, wife of Captain Peter C. Hains, now in the Queens county jail for the killing of William E. Annis, to-day instituted her action to secure the custody of her three children by applying, through her counsel, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, to submit an affidavit answering all the accusations of her husband and bringing counter charges against him.

Mrs. Hains's lawyer, Frank Wild, made the plea to Justice Carr, but after a conference with Lawyer Percy for Captain Hains, it was decided to let the case go over until Monday next.

Her Whole Story.

Lawyer Wild said that he would submit several affidavits, the chief of which would be one signed by Mrs. Hains.

This affidavit, he said, contains 8,000 words and tells her own story, and in connection therewith makes serious accusations against Captain Hains.

Captain Hains, according to a statement made to-day by District Attorney Darrin of Queens County, will be placed on trial for the killing of Annis on Monday, November 9. The case will be submitted to the Queens County Grand Jury on Friday next.

"I find, from reoprts of my experts and others who have had Captain Hains under observation in jail," said District Attorney Darrin, "that the prisoner has greatly recovered from the nervous state he was in immediately after the shooting at the Bayside Yacht Club. He is no longer nervous.

"No Insanity," Says Darrin.

"I don't think he has ever displayed any signs of insanity, and certainly he does not now. He is in perfect health, mentally as well as physically."

General and Mrs. Hains of Fort Hancock, grandparents of the children and their custodians now, are determined to resist the demand of the mother for her children.

Mrs. Hains is at the home of her mother, Mrs. Libby, at Winthrop, Mass., where she went after Captain Hains drove her from his home in Fort Hamilton.

Mrs. Hains fears most the influence of T. Jenkins Hains, brother of her husband, on the children. T. Jenkins Hains is in jail, held as an accessory to the murder of Annis, and Mrs. Hains fears he will be released and will poison the minds of her children against her.

"I must do everything possible to get my children out of reach of his influence," she said. "He has done everything he could to poison and corrupt the mind of my son. He has taught the child to use vile language and pandered to every evil instinct."

THOUSANDS AT THE FOOD FAIR ON THIRD DAY

Attendance at Park Square Coliseum Reaches Record Mark for Exposition.

Thousands of Bostonians and their friends from all over New England were on hand to-day for the opening of the third day at the Boston food fair in the Park Square Coliseum. The attendance was tremendous on the first day, but every day since the attendance figures are being surpassed.

If there was any fear on the part of Boston Retail Grocers' Association that New England would not flock to see the food fair, it has long since disappeared. The great show has been a big success.

The transformation which the decorators have wrought in the interior of the Coliseum has been a remarkable one. At night, when the great $50,000 canopy of blue, white and gold is lighted up by 80,000 electric bulbs, the scene inside the food fair is especially beautiful and dazzling.

Sousa's Band—America's greatest—is proving the top-notch feature with the high-class vaudeville performance headed by Onaip, the mysterious hypnotist from the New York Hippodrome, a close second. Sousa's Band plays each afternoon and evening in the main auditorium, free of all charge. The exhibitors are the best and largest in number in the history of the association shows.

To-night Sousa's Band plays the following program:

1—Famous scenes from the operas of Gounod.
2—Collocation, "Contes d'Hofman" (first time). ....Offenbach
3—Solo for soprano, card song from "The Bride Elect." Miss Lucy Allen ....Sousa
4—Valse, "The Man with Three Wives" (new). ....Lehar
5—Airs from "Nelly Neil" (new) ....Caryll

* * *

1—Scenes from the operas of Wagner.
2—Duet for cornets, "The Swiss Boy," Messrs. Clarke and Millhouse ....Short
3—(a) Tone picture, "A Day in Venice" ....Nevin
(b) March, "The Fairest of the Fair" (new). ....Sousa
(Written especially for the Boston food fair, 1908, and dedicated to the Boston Retail Grocers' Association.)
4—Violin solo, "Souvenir de Haydn," Miss Rose Reichard ....Leonard
5—Scenes from "The Gypsy Baron" ....Strauss

HUB MAN FORFEITS BAIL IN BROOKLYN

Albert C. Jahl, who formerly rented an office at No. 95 Milk street, city, and who was being held by the Brooklyn police for the Boston authorities on the charge of securing $500 on mortgaged furniture from Henry Genaske, also of this city, yesterday forfeited his bail in the Brooklyn Police Court. To-day Inspector Morris Wolf of police headquarters returned from Brooklyn without the prisoner.

THRONG AT FAIR GREETS DRAPER AND HIS STAFF

Acting Executive and Other Officials See Sights at Brockton To-day.

Special to the Boston American.

BROCKTON, Sept. 30.—Lieutenant-Governor Draper and members of the Governor's staff, in full dress uniform, attended the Brockton Fair to-day in recognition of the fact it is "Governor's Day." They came from Boston in a special car.

Besides Mr. Draper the party comprised Brigadier-General William H. Brigham, Colonel William C. Capelle, Major John Bigelow, Jr., Major Ira Vaughn, Major Philip S. Sears, Major Talbot Aldrich, Captain Guy Murchie, Captain John F. Kenealy, Captain Daniel H. Morgan, Captain Fred R. Robinson, Captain E. Dwight Fullerton, First Lieutenant Holton B. Perkins and First Lieutenant William S. Patten.

The members of the distinguished party "saw the sights" and planned to return to Boston in automobiles. They attracted a great deal of attention from the immense throng which filled the grounds, inspiring as much interest as any of the features of the day.

Horse Show Opened To-day.

Luncheon was served at the Commercial Club and they were entertained by a committee of the Brockton Agricultural Society. At the grounds they were the central figures in the public reception.

The Horse Show opened to-day as one of the great Fair features. Among those who have horses entered are Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Plant, Paul A. Sorg of New York, C. W. Watson of the Fairmont Farms in Richmond, Va., and J. W. Harriman of the Avendale Farm at Housatonic. Mr. Harriman is a nephew of E. H. Harriman, the railroad magnate, and, with Mr. Sorg and Mr. Watson, is a new exhibitor here.

Big Match Race.

Vieing with the aristocratic steeds of the horse show are the fleet trotters and pacers of the half-mile track, who have a special card for Governor's Day. There are four trots, two pace races, running races and a hurdle race, the last named a distinctly new feature for Brockton Fair.

As if this were not enough for Governor's Day, the mangement offers the big match race between the noted turf stars, Sweet Marie and Major Delmar, who come out to race for a special purse of $2,500, to which is added $500 bonus if the world's half-mile record is broken.

The fair grounds are jammed from the main entrance down through the Midway, all along the grand stand and quarter stretch, out by the horse barns, the cattle sheds, in the exhibition halls and around to the main gate again.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

The expected has happened in the controversy which has been carried on for some months past by the active members of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Some time ago, it is alleged, the international officers refused to issue a call for a convention. Nearly 200 locals took up the matter and decided to call a special convention, claiming that such a course was within their legal rights. This right, however, was disputed by the international officers.

The plans for the convention were, nevertheless, carried out, and the delegates assembled last week at St. Louis. It is now claimed that the convention voted out of office International President F. J. McNulty, International Secretary-Treasurer Peter W. Collins, a former Boston man, and several other international officers.

Secretary-Treasurer Peter W. Collins was prominent in the publication of the brotherhood's official journal. It is stated that F. W. Murphy of Cleveland is named as the new secretary-treasurer, and that he has been given instructions to take immediate possession of the national headquarters, and, if necessary, secure legal advice to secure the headquarters and property.

LABOR NOTES.

Hoisting and Portable Engineers No. 4 last night considered the circular letter sent out by President Gompers. Robert A. McKee of Peoria Ill., international secretary-treasurer, was the principal speaker. Secretary McKee is in consultation with Frank B. Monaghan, editor of the official journal of the craft, preparing the report of the recent convention for this month's issue of the journal. President Arthur M. Huddell of No. 4 announced some amendments to the international constitutional, the principal one being a change from the system of maitaining the permanent defence fund. Instead of a yearly tax of 50 cents the monthly per capita tax will be increased from 10 cents to 20 cents and a percentage placed in the fund.

Agent Charles Morris of the United Hatters has addressed meetings at Nashua, Webster and New Bedford during the past week in the interest of the label.

Plumbers No. 12 has established district and suburban branches. The Dorchester branch has twenty-seven members, and will admit fifteen new members at next Thursday's meeting at Field's Corner. The branches in Chelsea and Somerville are in a flourishing condition. All members will meet next Tuesday night at No. 514 Tremont street to elect delegates to the Boston C. L. U., Building Trades Section, and State Branch, A. F. of L. convention.

International Organizer William F. McCarthy of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers returned to Boston last night after a visit to Plymouth, Lynn, Danvers and Salem. He reports a steady growth in the membership of the locals. This week he will visit Portland, Bangor and Lewiston, Me., and will attend the label conference of the Cigar Makers' Unions at Providence October 7, and the annual convention of the State Branch, A. F. of L.

George Darby has been elected delegates to the State Branch convention by Steamfitters' Helpers No. 26.

Painters No. 11 will hold its annual ball at Odd Fellows' Hall November 18. Frank Moorhouse is chairman of the committee in charge.

Frank Jennings, business agent of Machinists, No. 264, has been elected secretary of the preliminary formation of a Metal Trades Section of the Boston Central Labor Union. Every local eligible will be called upon to send delegates to the next meeting, when a formal application for affiliation with the Boston C. L. U. and the Metal Trades Department of the A. F. of L. will be prepared. All unions eligible are requested to communicate with Secretary Jennings at his office No. 987 Washington street.

President Emmett L. Adams of Washington, of the National Lodge of Machinists, whose members are employed at the United States gun factories, will confer with the men employed in the Watertown arsenal, and to-morrow night will address Machinists, No. 264.

PIECE OF ROPE CLEW IN DEATH OF MRS. HOWARD

Police Find Much-Sought Bit of Evidence Against Husband of Victim.

Special to the Boston American.

NEW BEDFORD, Sept. 30.—A short piece of rope, knotted at one end and cleanly cut through at the other end, which has been found near Padanaran bridge, is believed by the police to be the much-sought piece of evidence they wanted against William C. Howard, charged with murdering his young wife, Ida Williams Howard, by drowning her in the Apponegansett River, near Padanaran bridge.

The rope was found by Police Inspector Sylvia, who had been searching the Padanaran territory for that particular thing. He will take the piece of rope to-day to Fort Rodman to see if it matches the painter of the dory which the police say Howard took when he rowed out from the fort to meet his wife at Padanaran. If the two pieces of rope match, the police, according to their theory, will have added another and highly important link to their chain of evidence.

From the place where the rope was found it is only a short distance to where Mrs. Howard was seen late Saturday night before her body was found. Howard could have walked in a few minutes from this point to meet his wife.

RICH MERCHANT HELD.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 30.—George Roukkous, a dry goods merchant, said to be the wealthiest Assyrian resident of the State, was to-day brought before United States Commissioner William P. Cross, charged with conspiracy under the Federal bankruptcy law. Roukkous was held in bail of $7,500.

The name of his opponent, William H. Felker of Northampton, was withdrawn by Water H. Hinds.

Alvin Smith of Athol was nominated for presidential elector.

Following his nomination Congressman Gillett made a spirited reply to the criticisms of his record in the House made by Mr. Felker.

There were 103 out of 123 delegates present.

FACTORY OWNER FINED.

IRISH ENVOYS IN CHICAGO

After the greeting at the station the party was taken to the Auditorium Annex, where prominent Chicagoans met them.

Gov. Haskell Faces Impeachment by Own Constituents

SHAWNEE MERCHANT SAYS OKLAHOMANS WILL FORCE HIM OUT OF OFFICE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—C. N. Haskell first Governor of the maiden State of Oklahoma, who resigned as campaign treasurer of the Democratic party recently, under pressure of the exposure of his alleged questionable dealings with the Standard Oil interests, stands discredited among his own constituents in his own State, according to Paul F. Cooper of the Shawnee National Bank and a member of the delegation of eighteen Oklahomans who are here as the guests of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

The Governor is not only in the bad graces of the voters of the State, but is in danger of impeachment, Mr. Cooper says.

"Governor Haskell stands repudiated by all self-respecting Oklahomans and if further exposures lend impetus to the trend of public sentiment, he will be forced to resign from office or will be impeached by the Legislature," said Mr. Cooper, who is a prominent lawyer and business man and a member of the Shawnee Chamber of Commerce.

"Not only is Governor Haskell in bad odor with the members of the opposition party in the State, but he has turned Democrats against him and other members of his party ticket, and Taft may sweep the State," continued Mr. Cooper.

MONNETT OF OHIO WILL TAKE STUMP TO SUPPORT BRYAN

ROCK ISLAND, Sept. 30.—W. J. Bryan was the special guest here at the "Democratic Day" exercises, and the peerless one was forced to do some rapid traveling in order to get here on time.

The feature of the meeting was the appearance of Mr. Bryan and ex-Attorney General Monnett on the same platform and the declaration by the latter that he had taken the stump for Mr. Bryan because of his prompt and decisive action in the Haskell case.

BRYAN SCARE OVER IN WESTERN STATES, HAMMOND DECLARES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—John Hays Hammond, president of the National League of Republican Clubs, has arrived in Washington to see President Roosevelt. He has charge of what will be from now on a whirlwind campaign to organize Republican voters into clubs and to stem the tide of Bryanism in the West.

In a discussion of political conditions he declared that New England would cast a solid vote for Taft and that the Republican candidate would carry New York, Ohio, Illinois and West Virginia. Indiana, he admitted, was doubtful.

Mr. Hammond reported that the Bryan "scare" of two weeks ago in the West had passed, and that the Republicans were pushing the campaign with more vim.

"Mr. Bryan has shot his bolt," said he, "and will not grow stronger as the campaign progresses."

DEMOCRATIC CLANS GATHER FOR THEIR BIG "NIGHT BEFORE"

With everything pointing to a harmonious convention to-morrow in Faneuil Hall, the Democratic clans are gathering at the Quincy House to-day for their "night before."

The candidate for Governor is to be Senator James H. Vahey, who has no opposition. The candidate for Lieutenant-Governor is to be John Golden of Fall River, if he can be persuaded to say yes. If Mr. Golden does not run, the candidate may be John Alden Thayer of Worcester.

Vahey and Golden is regarded as the strongest ticket that can be nominated.

The Democratic State Committee will meet this evening at the Quincy House, and afterwards the details of the convention will be gone over and the remainder of the State ticket selected.

SHEARN AROUSES ENTHUSIASM OF LOWER EAST SIDE

NEW YORK Sept. 30.—The independent spirit of the voters of 1905, when for the first time the grip of Tammany Hall on the districts of the lower East Side was broken, again was manifest last night at the Independence party's rousing meeting at Heinington Hall, No. 214 Second street.

The stirring scenes, the tumultuous cheering and the riot of enthusiasm which the various speakers invoked from an audience which packed the great hall almost to suffocation were only repetitions of the occurrences of the last mayoralty campaign.

Clarence J. Shearn, William A. De Ford, Stevens, candidate for Secretary of State; Dr. William Irving Sirovich, candidate for State Treasurer; Colonel John T. Martin, Elias B. Goodman, Henry A. Goulden, James A. Donegan and Colonel James Moran made candidate for Attorney-General; Frank H. addresses.

ARCHBOLD DECLARES LETTERS WERE TAKEN FROM FILES AND SOLD

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—In connection with the exposures of Standard Oil correspondence with political leaders made by William Randolph Hearst, John D. Archbold, vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, to-day gave out a statement in which he says that three years ago he discovered that certain letters were missing from his files. The man who was accused, says Mr. Archbold, denied his guilt, but later the person to whom some of the letters had been sold offered to return them for a consideration. According to the story of the go-between, declares Mr. Archbold, he had disposed of the letters to men representing Mr. Hearst's Journal. "The production of stolen letters by Mr. Hearst is further corroboration now," concludes Mr. Archbold's statement. "Obviously among such a coterie authenticity of their output is not to be lightly accepted."

TAFT'S BROTHER IS NAMED AS PARTY IN BIG GAS COMBINE

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 30.—Archibald S. White's $75,000,000 Columbia gas combine was projected into the national campaign when Lawyer S. Hughes Johnson of Cleveland sent a letter about it to William H. Taft.

Johnson tells Taft of the suit against the Columbia combine which Johnson filed for a stockholder in the People's Gaslight Company of Cleveland.

In this suit, he tells Taft, he accused his brother, Charles P. Taft, and "certain gentlemen associated with him representing Standard Oil interests," of having promoted a combination of all the gaslight companies of Cincinnati and Cleveland with the idea of preventing competition.

CAMPAIGN PROBLEM NOW NOT OF VOTES, BUT OF DOLLARS

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Both Republican and Democratic national committees are broke. Their treasuries are on the verge of bankruptcy. The problem in both Metropolitan Tower and Hoffman House headquarters is not of votes, but of dollars.

Up to date the Democrats have raised a little more than $300,000, derived mostly from small subscriptions. The Republicans have secured not to exceed $350,000, raised in larger sums and from fewer individuals than the Democratic fund.

Both parties already have expended practically their entire receipts and have outstanding contracts that will tax their last reserves. Neither side has any money to undertake the final month's campaign, which always has been the most expensive period.

TAFT PROMISES TARIFF REVISION AND REDUCTION

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Sept. 30.—Tariff revision, mostly downward, but in some instances upward, notably on pottery, was the keynote of Candidate Taft's ten speeches here. In none of them did he forget to "go after" his Nebraska opponent. The Ohioan's campaign through South Dakota terminated with an address to an audience from four States, Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Minnesota.

BRYAN CHANGES HIS SCHEDULE AND HURRIES TO LINCOLN

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Sept. 30.—William Jennings Bryan has suddenly changed his schedule after a conference with his brother, Charles W. Bryan, and is hurrying to his home in Lincoln, Neb. Mr. Bryan had planned a speaking tour through Iowa beginning to-morrow, but after conferring with his brother he suddenly announced a reversal of program.

Last night Mr. Bryan issued a statement in which he said that he would leave for Lincoln to-day, making several speeches en route. The principal address of the day was planned for Knoxville, Ia. Mr. Bryan's schedule calls for his arrival at Lincoln early to-morrow morning.

Although there is no foundation for the announcement, it was reported to-day that Mr. Bryan's brother had persuaded him to give up his strenuous campaigning on account of his health.

COLLEGE MEN TO BE APPEALED TO IN FIGHT FOR TAFT

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—College men in institutions of learning all over the country are to be appealed to between now and the election to "whoop it up for Taft."

The first aggressive step in this direction was taken to-day when eastern headquarters of the National Republican College League was opened at No. 1 Madison avenue, in the offices of the National Republican Committee. Alfred E. Lunt, president of the league, has placed Herbert M. Myers of Columbus, O., for some years president of the Ohio Republican College League, in charge of the New York headquarters.

Already 300 Taft and Sherman clubs have been formed in colleges and universities, and these will at once begin active work. Nearly 100,000 members are enrolled. A college campaign paper with a national circulation of 50,000 will appear in a few days, and will be used as a formidable weapon to fight for the party. A register will be kept at the headquarters for college men who may call.

There Are Lots of Bases He Won't Touch

MORE LOVE OF GOD NEEDED IN OUR EDUCATION

—Archbishop O'Connell

"This is a cold age in which we are living. What we want is more heart and more love of God in our education."

Archbishop William H. O'Connell made this statement to 700 Boston college students gathered in Immaculate Conception Church at the formal opening of the college, which was marked by a solemn high mass.

"Why are you here to-day?" continued the Archbishop. "There are many other schools and colleges which have opened wide their arms and would give you a welcome. You are here because you are taught sentiment and love of your religion.

"Other schools and colleges tell their pupils to be honest and to be good but we teach our boys how to be honest and good through religion."

After mass the boys went direct to their study rooms at the college. A total of 677 students are enrolled this year, nearly twice as many as last year.

Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, president of the college was celebrant of the mass; Rev. James I. McGuire, deacon and Rev. H. A. Dalton, S. J., sub-deacon. The assistants to His Grace the Archbishop were Rev. J. Havens Richards and Rev. Charles J. Lyons.

REFUSES TO LET THAW GO

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Sheriff Lane of West Chester County to-day, at White Plains, declared he would refuse to deliver over Harry K. Thaw to the federal authorities at Pittsburg, even should they send for the prisoner with the order of a Pittsburg federal judge.

"I will have the matter adjudicated in the State courts here," said the sheriff. "I will exhaust every possible recourse I have in the State courts before I will permit Thaw to go to Pittsburg. I consider him a dangerous lunatic who should not thus be permitted to get beyond the jurisdiction of the State."

WIFE ORDERED OUT OF HOME, KILLED SELF

MILFORD, Sept. 30.—Ordered from home by her husband during a quarrel, Mrs. Vermadalia Cirwiethien seized a revolver and shot herself in the breast, dying almost instantly. At the same time the angry husband, it is said, fired four shots at a well-known young man who was visiting the house.

Cirwiethien had started on a trip to Georgetown, but returned home rather unexpectedly, and a quarrel ensued in which he told the woman to leave the premises. Cirwiethien allowed her to gather together her few trinkets. He remained in the room as she descended to the porch and was astonished when she returned.

She pleaded to stay for the sake of her little girl, but the husband was obdurate. He offered to accompany her to the home of her parents, but she refused and once more left him.

Then he heard a pistol shot, and rushing down stairs found his wife lying near the door with a bullet wound in the breast.

Cirwiethien called up Dr. F. T. Ituhl, who lived opposite. He was cool and said: "I am afraid I have a dead woman on my hands; come with me."

FAVOR MAYOR'S MARKET LEASES

Mayor Hibbard has won another victory over the Finance Commission, by the acceptance in the committee on market department of his plan for new leases of Faneuil Hall Market. At a meeting of the committee at City Hall, it was decided to report next Monday to the Board of Aldermen in favor of an increase of twelve per cent. in the market leases, a ten-year term of lease instead of five, a rental of $5,000 for the Ames Plow Company, and no extra compensation for rental of areaways under the sidewalk.

This report is exactly in line with the recommendations of the Mayor, and differs from the report of the Finance Commission in that the latter recommended an extra rental price for areaways.

It is believed the marketmen will make a concerted fight against a further increase of their rentals at this time.

JOHN D. BACK AGAIN AS HEAD OF OIL TRUST

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—John D. Rockefeller, who has taken the public into his confidence in telling the story of his life in a popular magazine, has emerged from his partial retirement in relation to the affairs of the Standard Oil Company and is once more its active, dominant head.

Mr. Rockefeller testified in Chicago some time ago that he had had no active part in the concern for two or three years; now this is all changed. Where two or three years ago he visited No. 26 Broadway, the Standard's headquarters, only once in several months, he now makes his appearance once or twice a week.

Mr. Rockefeller is a keen analytical student of big social and economic movements, and in discussing the present spirit which is moving the American people he has declared to close personal friends that he believed a policy of publicity was best, especially in a country where reading is so universal and a tremendous campaign of education being carried on by the newspapers and the magazines.

It is in the furtherance of this plan that he has again taken the headship of the corporation that is figuring so vitally in the present political campaign. Nothing is now done by the Standard Oil Company without first consulting him.

QUICKLY CURES
RHEUMATIC PAINS

Go to any good prescription druggist and get the following:

One ounce Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, and one ounce Toris Compound. Add these to a half pint of first-class whiskey, and use a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed time. The bottle must be well shaken each time.

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago.

Although this is seemingly a commonplace formula, yet it is the most effective known for the eradication of acid poisons from the blood, absolutely curing all kinds of rheumatism, and at the same time restoring the whole system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

The enfeebled body and nerves will feel its remarkably restoring effects after the first few doses, but it should be continued until health is fully recovered.

The prompt use of this excellent mixture will be found to save many a dollar in doctor bills and much suffering.

KERN WAS CHAMPION OF INDIANA GAMBLERS

EX-STATE OFFICIAL SAYS CANDIDATE, AS TAGGART'S COUNSEL, TRIED TO BALK REFORM.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—John W. Kern, Democratic candidate for Vice-President, was depicted as the defender of roulette wheels and faro banks, the champion of the gambling houses at French Lick and West Baden, in a statement issued at Republican national headquarters by Charles W. Miller, ex-attorney-general of Indiana.

Miller is the official who closed Thomas Taggart's gambling casinos at the two Indiana resorts two years ago, and he makes the charge that in his efforts to enforce the anti-gambling laws he was fought at every turn by Mr. Kern.

"When I closed up the French Lick and West Baden casinos," said Mr. Miller, "Mr. Kern was on the ground in the interests of Tom Taggart to balk me at every turn. He was Taggart's attorney. He defended Taggart in the courts and in the newspapers, belittling the efforts which the State was making to put these gambling houses out of existence."

In retaliation for the attack by Democrats upon George R. Sheldon, treasurer of the Republican National Committee, the Republican managers clipped an editorial from the Terre Haute Star of September 27, listing ten corporations for which John E. Lamb, acting chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is general counsel.

BRYAN THROWS DOWN GAUNTLET TO ROOSEVELT

Peerless One Declares That President Has Demanded Aid of Trust Heads.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Sept. 30.—Challenging comparison of his own record with that of the President and intimating that the chief executive had practically demanded the support of all the trust magnates, William J. Bryan has issued a hot reply to Roosevelt's recent statement.

In his onslaught Bryan says:

"If elected I will enforce the laws against trusts, not spasmodically and intermittently, but persistently and consistently."

"They will not be suspended even for the protection of Cabinet officers," he adds curtly, referring to the Presidential whitewashing of J. Paul Morton.

Concerning the President's accusations intended to connect him with law-defying trusts, he says:

"I have lived in vain if your accusations lose me a single friend."

Campaign Contributions.

Referring to the President's mention of the contributions to his campaign fund of 1896, he challenges Mr. Roosevelt to make public the republican contributions made to Mr. Hanna that year.

"I am willing to have both funds published; are you?" he demands.

He arraigns the President in summary style for declaring in his letter that he is opposed to making campaign contributions public before election because the public would draw a wrong conclusion. He charges that this statement shows the President is not willing to trust the people.

He says that Mr. Taft will not dare approve this statement of the President, which is equivalent to saying that the people have not sufficient intelligence to draw a correct conclusion regarding such contributions as those of E. H. Harriman and John D. Rockefeller to the Republican campaign, if those contributions were made known before election.

The Haskell Charges.

Other striking points in the letter are:

"Any charges against Haskell cannot be construed as connecting Democratic party with any trust or law-defying corporation."

"You have given wings to accusations against me that no disinterested person would make against another without investigation."

BANKER ENDS LIFE IN BAY

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 30.—Despondent over the lack of work and fearing an operation which he knew must be performed, Rolla F. White, a prominent Elk, Mason and Shriner, jumped from the Boston boat in Portland Harbor to-day and was drowned. He has been living in Lewiston, Me., for a year, but is better known in Ohio, where he was a prominent banker at Washington Court House.

WASHING THE HAIR.

Common Soaps and Shampoos Often Do More Harm Than Good.

People might as well look facts in the face and not be humbugged any longer by dangerous and worthless preparations for the hair. The vital point to remember is this: Dandruff is the direct cause of nearly every case of baldness, and is also the principal cause of many other ailments of the hair and scalp. The one thing needed above all other things to overcome dandruff and give the hair the gloss of health is cleanliness. You have got to clean the scalp of scales and dandruff, and you have got to keep the pores of your scalp open before you can hope to have beautiful hair. From the sebaceous glands on your head there constantly comes an oily secretion to moisten the scalp and give a gloss to the hair. Floating in the air are millions of fine particles of dust, dirt and disease germs. These settle upon the head, mix with the oily secretions, and in a very short time dandruff and scales are formed. These scales stop up the pores, so that the hair roots are not nourished as they should be. And then the hair becomes sick, dies and falls out. Some people allow all this dirt and disease and filth to accumulate on their heads for weeks or months without washing the scalp and hair. Everybody's head and hair ought to be washed at least once a week, no matter what anybody else tells you. But don't make the mistake of using common soaps and shampoos. Common soaps contain too much alkali, and they leave the hair dry and harsh, and they do not leave the scalp in a healthy condition. Improper soaps and shampoos actually do more harm than good. You should use the one thing in all this world which is above suspicion and above criticism, and that is Birt's Head Wash. It is made of Refined Soap, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerine and Salicylic Acid. This formula is so generally recognized as proper that you are invited to ask any physician you know what he thinks about it. Birt's Head Wash doesn't simply take off the dirt, dandruff, germs and microbes, but it leaves the scalp soft and moist and the hair fine and glossy. The first time you use Birt's Head Wash you can see an improvement in your hair, and its regular use will help to completely overcome dandruff. You will be astonished how many impurities will be found in your head and hair, because nothing takes them out like Birt's Head Wash. If your druggist will not supply you, send 50c in stamps or money order to Birt's Head Wash, 576 Fifth Avenue, New York, and a package will be sent you by prepaid mail.

MIRANDY ON RETAINING A HUSBAND'S LOVE

By Dorothy Dix

"DE odder night," said Mirandy, "Sis Cynthy, what is one of dese heah trouble gatherers what ain't never happy onless she is a-settin' up nussin' a secret sorrer, comes to my house, an' after we done pass de time of day she heave a sigh dat busted fo' buttons off de middle of de back of her shutwaist.

"'Sis Mirandy,' says she, 'what is dis world a-comin' to? For hit's done got so you can't believe half you see, an' nothin' dat you hears.'

"'Dis shorely am a vale of lies and liars,' I respons, 'but what is done happen to you dat makes you prognosticate in that tone of voice?'

"'Well,' says Sis Cynthy, 'you know dat divorshee lady what comes to our chu'ch las' week an' delivers a lecture befo' de Daughters of Zion on de subject of "How to Retain a Husband's Affections"? She suttinly did talk most grand, an' hit was a eddifyin' discourse as I ever listened to.'

"'Hit's a mighty funny thing to me,' 'spon's I, 'dat all de women dat is goin' around layin' down de law about how to keep a husband is dem what is done los' 'em, or ole maids what ain't never had 'em.'

Was a Talker from 'Way Back

"'Dat's de true word,' 'sclaimed Sis Cynthy, 'but didn't none of us think of hit at de time; an' she was a talker from 'way back. She began by sayin' dat men was fickle an' prone to change as de sparks am to fly upward, and dat by de time a woman gets settled down inter double harness de man has most ginerrally kicked over de traces.'

"'"What wife in dis audience," says she a-pintin' a bony finger at us, "what wife in dis audience can rise up from her cheer an' say dat her husband treats her lak he did in de days dat he was courtin' her? Does he bring her violets when he comes home at night? Does he spend his evenin' holdin' her hand? Does hit take ten minutes for him to kiss her goodby when he leaves her presence? Does he tell her how beautiful an' what a angel she is, an' dat he asks nothin' of Heaven but to make him her slave?

"'"No! A thousand times, no! You all knows dat when yo' husbands don't make a sneak to de corner saloon after dinner dat dey sets around home in a way dat would make a clam on ice seem real excited an' lively company, an' dat if yo' husband was to hand yo' out a few compliments about yo' pussonal appearance, or give yo' a kiss dat had a little ginger in hit, dat yo' would fall dead wid surprise.

All Tuhn White Roun' de Gills

"'"An' what, my sisters, is de whereforeness of dis whereforeness, I asks you? Hit means dat yo' husbands is done los' intrust in you, dat deir affections is done simmered down to de lukewarm state, an' dat hit is yo' business to raise dat love to de bilin' pint again."

"'At dese words, Sis Mirandy, all of us turned sort of white aroun' de gills, for dough we never had thought befo' dat we was in any danger of losin' our husbands' affections, we see as soon as she pint hit out to us dat dat was de ve'y way our husbands acts; so we all leaned forward, stretchin' our necks lak my ole domminecker hen does when she is waitin' to be fed, whilst de lady speaker told us how to make our husbands fall in love wid us over agin, an' retain deir affections when we got 'em.

"'I disremember a lot dat she said, but de main thing was dat we must all git thin, an' slim, an' willowy, an' keep dressed up all de time, an' coquette wid our husbands an' not let 'em feel too sure of us.

"'Well, dat slim business certainly did git away wid me, Sis Mirandy, becaze I quit weighing when I tilted de scales at 240; but when I went home, instid of pullin' off my good clothes an' gittin' busy wid de cook stove, I set down in de parlor an' waited for Jeems Henry to come home.

"'I 'lowed to bring de ole light back into his eyes, lak de speaker said, when he saw me so fixed up; but when he gin one surprised look at me, an' anodder at de cold stove an' no supper, he ax me what in de name of creation is de matter wid me, an' is I done gone out of my senses?

"'At dat I roll my eyes at him, an' look coy, an' say, 'I done see de preacher as I come home dis evenin', an' he suttinly am a pussonable man.'

"'"Well," spons he, "maybe so; but ef I ketches dat flop-yeared hound a hangin' 'round heah I lay I'll break ev'y bone in his body."

"'Den I rolls my eyes some mo' at Jeems Henry, lak I used to do when he was a courtin' me, and' dat he used to think w fascinatin', but I reckon he done forgo for he look sort of scared lak, an' poke his head in de kitchen do' an' hollers o to one of de chillen to run for de docto for deir ma was sudden took, an' out her haid.

"'At dat I got up an' pulled off my go clothes an' cooked supper an' things we on jes de same at our house, dough all evenin' I seen Jeems Henry lookin' at m sort of slantwise over de paper, lak thought I done gone crazy, an' I w ashamed to tell him dat I had jest be tryin' to win back his lost love an' intru

"'An' dat's what make me say what do, Sis Mirandy, dat dere ain't nothin' dese heah recipes about fascinatin' yo' hu band over again. Hit can't be did.'

"'Maybe married women ain't lost de husbands' love so often as they think the is, Sis Cynthy,' says I. 'As for me, I do take no stock in dis heah love talk. Tal cheap. De proof of a husband's affecti is de way he treats yo', not what he say an' de test of love after marriage ai bringin' home vi'lets; hit's bringin' home pay envelope. As long as Brer James Hen does dat yo' ain't got no call to worry.

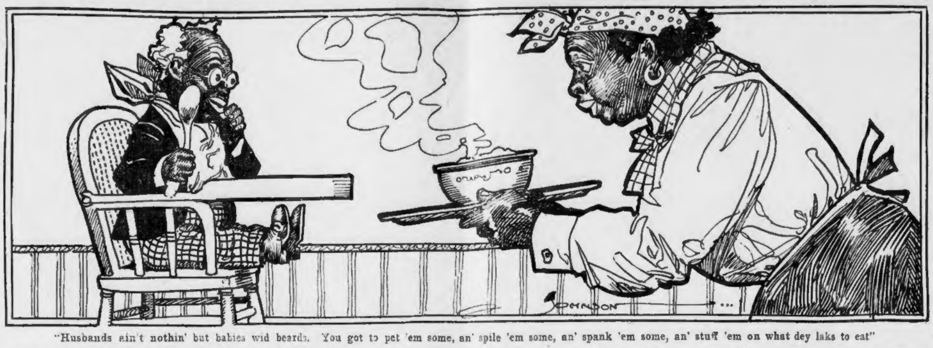
Husbands Want Peace, Not Thrills

"'An' don't you fool yo'self about thin in' dat you' is gwine to retain yo' h band's affection by keepin' him on anxious seat. After a man is done be married ten years, he ain't hankerin' af thrills; he's lookin' for peace.

"'De trouble wid most women,' goes I, 'is dat dey treats deir husbands lak re sonable beings, which ain't no way to tre a husband, for husbands ain't nothin' b babies wid beards. You got to pet 'e some, an' spile 'em some, an' spank 'e some, an' shet yo' eyes to deir doin's som an' stuff 'em on what dey lak to eat, a ef yo' does dat yo' can mostly keep 'em home—or leastways dey's sure to co back to hit.'

"'But ain't dere no way a woman can shore of retainin' her husband's love?' ax Sis Cynthy.

"'Narry a way so far as I knows,' spo I. 'An' dat makes de intrust of mat mony. Hit would be awful wearin' to tied to somethin' yo' couldn't give awa or kill, or lose.'"



"Husbands ain't nothin' but babies wid beards. You got to pet 'em some, an' spile 'em some, an' spank 'em some, an' stuff 'em on what dey laks to eat"

When Love Grows Cold

A Recent Example Warns Against Hasty Marriages

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE other day a bride of two weeks left her husband, her explanation being that her love had grown cold.

She had married after an engagement which lasted two weeks.

The love that cools in four weeks is, of course, but a flash in the pan, and not even a good imitation of real love.

It is only in novels that true love comes at first sight. The first meeting may excite admiration and a determination to become friends, but it cannot excite actual love.

How can you be sure that you want to spend the rest of your life with a person whom you have only met once? You may know that you like to dance with him, to talk with him; but how about sitting opposite him at the breakfast table 365 days in the year?

Don't make up your mind to accept a man until you are quite sure you will be happy with him; and then think it all over again, and don't accept him until you are quite sure that you can't be happy without him.

He may be slim and young and dashing now, but some day he may be old and heavy and his waist line a thing of the past. Can you love him when that day comes?

He may develop little mannerisms that will drive you to distraction, but you must love him well enough to put up with them.

You must love him well enough to wear the same coat for three or four seasons uncomplainingly in case times are hard.

In other words, you must love him in shadow and sunshine, in sickness and health.

So don't you see, my girls, what the strength and quality of your love must be when you agree to become a man's wife?

A six-months' engagement is not too long for any young people to stand, and it is one of the sweetest periods in a girl's life.

I am not an advocate of long engagements—say of three or four years—because I think both girl and man are in a false position. They see each other every day, and there is great danger of their love becoming dulled and commonplace.

But don't, I beg of you, become engaged to a man whom you have known but two weeks.

Engagements of this kind are usually the result of Summer vacations.

Given a moonlit beach, or mountain path, there are very few young people who are not easy prey for little Master Cupid.

But if they would only wait and review the situation by prosaic daylight, they would stand a far greater chance of ultimate happiness.

Girls frequently write me that they are "desperately" in love with some man whom they have met perhaps three or four times.

I do not worry greatly over such letters, because I know that the chances are they will fall out of love as easily as they fell in.

All I ask of you is to be sure of yourself before you marry. Don't mistake infatuation for love.

In real love there must be a steady friendship, congeniality and respect, behind the first glamour. For the glamour may wear itself out, but the true steadfastness remains forever where the marriage is built on love in its highest, best sense.

Mrs. Pell, Mentor of Society, to Write for Boston American

IF smart society in America has a mentor and guide, it is Mrs. Mary Hutton Pell.

If you ask anybody that knows who is au fait with the latest quirk of etiquette; who knows what's what about decorations and entertaining; who has an inner light on the training of servants; who can devise recherche menus for dinner and supper parties; who knows the very latest thing in bridge prizes and has inspirations about cotillion favors and who is an authority on just the smart way of giving every sort of a social function, why, the answer will be:

"Mrs. Pell!"

Mrs. Pell—the Mercer Pells, you know—was born into the smartest of the smart set, and has long been one of the bright particular stars of the "400."

She is an acknowledged authority on matters social. The BOSTON AMERICAN has just secured from her a most interesting and instructive series of articles dealing with these subjects.

They will cover the entire social life of a young married woman. The first paper will tell of how the bride, who has just returned to the city from her honeymoon and set up a home of her own, acquaints her friends with the fact that she is ready to receive them, and gives her first dinner.

This will be followed by articles on her first tea and her first "At Home."

Other articles will be devoted to the coming out party of the young daughter and the various functions that are given for the debutante.

The etiquette of mourning will be described, plans for jolly and informal supper parties will be given, as will also suggestions for Halloween pranks, and new ideas for the celebration of the stated feasts of the year, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

In still other articles Mrs. Pell will describe how she manages the ultra smart affairs she superintends, and then tell of how the woman with one maid, or no maid at all, may entertain her friends just as charmingly.

Such a series of articles will meet a long-felt want in every feminine breast, and their value will be enhanced by the replies that Mrs. Pell will make to any inquiries that may be addressed to her about points of etiquette or social usage.

All that the readers of the AMERICAN, who wish information on any of these points, will have to do, will be to address: Mrs. Pell, care BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston.

The first article in this remarkably interesting and valuable series will appear in this page to-morrow.

Expert Advice on Health and Beauty

TWO REQUESTS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will peroxide in the water in which I wash my hair lighten it in color? It is brown and I would like it a little lighter. Please advise me also if there is anything that will make a thick lip thinner?

WAITING.

PEROXIDE will lighten the hair, but the use of it in time injures the hair. Why not use a tablespoon of salts of tartar in the shampoo water and the juice of half a lemon in the rinse water. This will give the beautiful golden tint to the hair without injuring it. Compressing the lips muscularly and holding them tightly may help some. Otherwise, nothing but the surgeon's knife can change the lips.

HAIR TOO THIN

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I am a young man and my hair is very thin. I would like it to grow thick and darker. Will vaseline grow hair in a short time, and will it cause it to be any darker? If so, which is the best kind to use? N. I. F.

VASELINE is about the best hair grower. Get the common variety known as red vaseline to the druggists. Massage the scalp well every night with a very few drops of this until it has all been absorbed. Do not use too much, as it will only make the hair greasy and disagreeable. Do not shampoo until compelled to for cleanliness sake, and then use egg shampoo, drying the hair in the sun and massaging the dry scalp well at the same time. See to it that you are in perfect physical condition, as nothing more quickly reflects a disordered state than the hair. Vaseline makes the hair slightly darker.

Helpers for Housewives

FOR every quart of water to be used in cleaning a silk dress, either white or colored, pare and grate one large potato. Put the grated potatoes into the water, which must be cold and soft; let water stand two days without being disturbed and then carefully pour off the clear liquid from the sediment into a large vessel, into which dip the garments up and down. Silk must not be creased by wringing. When nearly dry, lay it flat on a table and wipe it first on one side and then on the other. If it needs pressing, do so between flannel with a moderate iron.

Flannel rags, if soaked in the following mixture and then dried, will make splendid polishing cloths for silverware: Mix two pounds of whiting and one-half ounce of oleic acid with a gallon of gasolene. Stir and mix thoroughly. Cloths dipped in this mixture should be kept away from fire or open flame, and when dried they not only give a fine gloss to silverware, but will not soil the hands, and will preserve their polishing qualities indefinitely.

Cold boiled rice left from a meal can be utilized by adding a beaten egg and milk and formed into cakes and fried.

Use olive oil when salting almonds or peanuts. It gives a finer flavor than butter.

When putting up peaches scald them and rub off peeling instead of using knife.

The Manicure Lady

She Has Yearnings for Life on Some Other Planet

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"AIN'T you ever been interested in astronomy, George?" asked the Manicure Lady.

"Nix," said the Head Barber. "I used to look up at the stars once in a while, but now my neck is so fat that every time I look straight up I cut it on the back of my collar. What's the use of keeping track of the stars, anyhow? They are all there, ain't they? We can't reach them, can we, no matter how much we rubber?"

"That ain't any kind of talk for a civilized gent which is living in this enlightened era," declared the Manicure Lady. "I should think, George, that you would like to spend some of them spare hours when you ain't whittling whiskers in looking over the vast beauties of the mighty firmament, where countless suns and their attendant planets sweeps majestic through illimitable space. I seen that in a book, that last part."

"Times is too hard for frills," said the Head Barber. "The way I figure it, I'm near enough to the stars when I have to climb five flights of stairs to my lowly little Harlem flat after a hard day at the shop.

"Five flights of stairs wouldn't be bad for Edward Payson Weston or Dan O'Leary, or a kangaroo, but for a gent that has kidney feet from standing up hours and hours and hours, it's some mountain scaling. I don't want to know about stars and planets. All I want to know is that my job is safe."

Calls George an Earth Worm

"Barbers is awful grovelers and earth worms," said the Manicure Lady. "Any one would think to look at you, George, that you would take some interest in the planets that hangs on the horizon red as ruby wine, like the book says that I was reading, even if you didn't take any interest in the milky way. Don't it thrill you none, George, to see a planet that is colored like wine?"

"Not the least in the world," said the Head Barber. "The only star I care about is James K. Hackett, and I was there the night he got wounded in the foot in a duelling scene. I was some disappointed, too, because I always heard that Jim was a great swordsman, and I never knew that a good swordsman would block a sword thrust with his hoof, I——"

"I ain't talking about the stage," snapped the Manicure Lady. "I am talking about astronomy. The book that I was reading was called 'Other Worlds Than Ours,' and it was awful interesting.

"In one place it said that every single star that we could see in the skies had a lot of planets around it, every planet being as big as our world, or bigger. Just think of that, George. I wonder if they have barbers on all them planets?

Wants to Try Another Planet

"I was telling Wilfred last night that I wished that Mister Wilbur Wright could fix up an aeroplane which would take folks to some other planet, where wages might be better.

"I wish I could strike some planet where a lady could do gents nails without having the gents ask her out to one of them Bohemian dinners, where the dinner is 45 cents and the tablecloth is all over red wine stains.

"Wouldn't it be great if I could work in a new field altogether, and never hear a of the old gags about my starry orbs a my bewitching personality? I would care for any grand planet—just a go solid minor league planet, where ladies recognized as such and where even sheath skirt would be a royal raiment worn for virtue's sake."

"There wouldn't be a chance," assert the Head Barber. "Even if you could g an aeroplane that could make the trip lightning, it would be a long and tireso ride, like going from Chicago to Tuc Arizona, or from New York to New chelle.

"By the time you got there you would be a young lady any longer, and would shy of all them endearing young char which makes you such a strong member our staff. And anyhow, even if you co get there in a week, you might be against it.

It Might be Even Worse.

"If the planet was more developed th ours, there would be more flirting and mo invitations to dinners, because as time g on it gets more and more that way, a if the planet was in the rough, like th earth was when them big blizzards a mastodons was swooping around, the people wouldn't care to have their nails did."

"I guess you're right," sighed the Manicure Lady. "Perhaps I am better off right where I am, but sometimes I dream of another planet, where I will land after eons and eons of floating through immensity, where wondrous purple banks of clouds will shed gold rain-mist on my angel face.

"I sometimes dream, George, that in th days to come I will journey far beyond ou planets, far beyond our sun, and come a last to some secluded satellite where red, red roses, rank on rank, give up their fragrance to the humming birds. Don't you ever dream dreams like that, George?"

"I hardly ever dream any dreams a all," replied the Head Barber. "All I d is snore."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YOU ARE RIGHT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in a sorry plight and would be obliged for your sensible advice. I have to take two trains going to business, and a gentleman acquaintance of mine also takes the same trains I do and naturally pays my fare. Now I d not wish him to do this, as I know h is only a workingman, and would lik to know if I should tell him that will not meet him unless he permit me to pay my own fare.

ONE IN DOUBT.

TELL him that it is very kind of to offer to pay your fare, but that really cannot permit it. You will hav be very firm about it, and if he insists him that he is forcing you to take ano train.

THE WARRENS OF VIRGINIA

A Novel from the Romantic Belasco Production of the Play by William C. De Mille.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Dupe

ARTHUR WARREN held the candle while his father hastily scanned the dispatch. He read as follows:

"General Humphreys: Take your cavalry and support General Sheridan, who is waiting to intercept and capture the Confederates' supply train on the North road. "GRIFFIN."

"By God, I knew it!" exclaimed Warren bringing his fist down upon the table. "They've discovered the route, the damned rascals. How in the devil did they do it? If we continue by the North road—ah Ned, you here? Blake, take charge of the prisoner. Put him in there," he ordered, pointing to the door of the library. "Turn the key and double the guard!

"If the train continues by the North road it goes to certain capture. Our forces will be cut to pieces at the cross roads. But, by God, we'll beat them yet. There is time to warn the train."

"Just time, father," said Lieutenant Warren, "and I know every inch of the road."

"Good, son!"

"No, no! Not Arthur!" protested Mrs. Warren, with fear large in her eyes.

Her husband ignored her.

"Find them on the North road, Arthur and tell them to cut through and pass by Beaver Dam bridge. Remember—pass by Beaver Dam bridge. The North road is ambushed. Don't forget. You must find them, boy; you must find them, son."

"I'll find them, sir."

"Go, boy; go!"

Young Warren, drawing his battered slouch hat down over his eyes and feeling for the security of his sword, fairly ran out of the room to begin the performance of his hazardous task.

The music of shrill fifes and rattling drums of the approaching Confederate division floated through the wide window.

"Do you hear, mother?" said old Warren joyfully, "It's the army! They are coming up! They'll be here in a minute!"

He took up his long overcoat.

"You are not going out, John?"

"Not going out?" he cried back at her. "Of co'se I'm going out! And you're going out with me. Get your bonnet. Not going out when I hold in my hand," he said ecstatically, as he waved the false despatch, "new eatin' and drinkin' and medicine for that brave army?

"I want to see the look on General Lee's face when you—you, mother—place this despatch in his hand. Not going out? Why this is the moment that the Warren family was bo'n fo'.

"Here, you, mother, take this desptach. It must come to Uncle Robert from your hands. Oh, we've fooled the Yanks this time, mother."

Old Warren slapped his legs and roared with laughter. "I've certainly turned the trick this time on ole Jim Griffin!" he shouted.

He waited impatiently till his wife appeared in bonnet and shawl, and arm in arm they moved out to await the coming of Lee, the ruinous decoy despatch clasped firmly in Mrs. Warren's delicate hand.

CHAPTER XV.

The Pass

A FEW lamps and an army lantern dimly illuminated the big room of the Warren home just before dawn of the day that followed the arrest of Lieutenant Burton, and the finding of the false dispatches that he bore, as it had been schemed by the Union generals with a view to causing the Confederates to send the relief train into ambush and capture at Beaver Dam bridge.

General Warren sat at the table with the lamp light centred on military maps and papers in front of him. Future military operations, to be made possible by the restoration to vigor and new courage of Lee's forces, were running nimbly in a brain made excited by his fever.

All the while his ear was alive for the sound of cheers that he knew would arrive from the starved soldiers when the coming of the supply train had taken the benedicent form of a certainty.

A sentinel paced the doorway and Tom Dabney, the general's orderly, stood inside the room, resting on his musket and fast asleep as he stood.

"Zack, you've got hunter's ears. Have you heard anything moving to-night?" asked General Warren, bestirring himself from his reverie.

"Only the prisoner there, suh, walking up and down. But he's been quiet now for a spell. I reckon, perhaps, he's asleep," responded the sentinel.

"Hear no sound over to the South?"

"Toward Beaver Dam way? No, suh."

"She ought to be gettin' through now—the old relief train," observed General Warren. But there was no anxiety in his tone. He was sure that the night's plan was destined for success.

"I'm going to go upstairs and take a nap," General Warren told his wife, "a nap with my boots on and one eye open. I want to be ready when that train comes in."

"Don't be long, dear," she pleaded, and went to seek Agatha, with the reassuring slip of paper that was to be Burton's safe conduct from the Confederate camp after the supply train should have arrived.

General Warren went to the table and, gathering up all his papers, placed them in a metal dispatch box. With these under his arm he started to leave the room. Outside the calls of the guard were heard, as the relief took the place of the men who had been on duty since midnight. The first faint glow of dawn was in the sky.

It was Blake, one of the relief guard, who had just entered upon duty, who answered General Warren's call and assured his commander that he would be awakened as soon as any definite news of the supply train came.

Whereupon General Warren blew out the lights and left only the army lantern to dispel the darkness. Blake moved cautiously to the prison room and unlocked the door, calling Burton. "It's all right. They are going to bed. I'm on guard."

"My God, Blake, this is despicable," muttered Burton. "It seems like years since last night."

"It's almost time now. They ought to meet at the Beaver Dam bridge at 4 o'clock. And as for its being despicable—it's war; that's the explanation. Yes, it's almost 4 o'clock now—fifteen minutes to 4. They will surely meet by 4 o'clock."

"My God!" moaned Burton.

"You're nervous," said Blake, not unsympathetically. "Brace up! We'll need our wits about this dawn. Warren has no choice but to have us shot when he finds us out. It's only a poor chance, but we may get away in the uproar when they hear of the attack. If we don't get away then; well—then we will not get away at all."

"You look out for yourself, Billy," answered Burton. "I don't care much myself. I suppose I'm what they call a good soldier, but a damned poor figure of a man. I entered this house as a guest and I'm pulling it down over my ears. I want to get out of this house so much"—something like a flash of hysteria passed over Burton's face—"and by God I will!"

"Do You Want to Be Shot?"

The wide doorway was open and Burton made a rush for it. Blake seized him and hurled him back in the room. The voice of a corporal commanding an approaching guard was heard. Blake whispered angrily:

"Do you want to be shot? Don't you hear? Some one is coming. Get in here."

He pointed to the prisonroom and pushed Burton inside, then turned the key in the door. Then Blake tore off his overcoat and threw it over the army lantern.

The corporal's guard marched unsuspectingly past the darkened room, but Blake in warning Burton that somebody was coming referred to the sound of steps that came along the hallway in the south wing of the house.

The guard having passed, Blake uncovered the lantern, and, getting hastily into his coat, took his sentinel's place at the window. Then he turned to watch the advent of the person he had heard approaching along the south wing. The door opened softly. Agatha Warren appeared.

"Oh, it's you, miss," said Blake, lowering his gun.

She smiled at Blake. A certain quiet happiness pervaded her face. She bore a little tray with a small coffee pot and two cups and saucers on it.

"I have my father's permission to see Lieutenant Burton, if he will see me," she said.

CHAPTER XVI.

'Are Northern Men So Different'

"IF you have your father's permission to see Lieutenant Burton, I will call him willingly," said Blake, and opening the door of the room where Burton was jailed, he called to him. Burton slowly came out. He stopped in the doorway and stared doggedly at Agatha.

"Lieutenant Burton," said the girl shyly, "if I'm not disturbing you, I—you didn't have any supper last night. I thought a little early breakfast might—it isn't real coffee," she said, with a funny glance at the little pot on the tray, "but it'll warm you and——"

"Thank you, but you shouldn't have troubled," said Ned, and the shame of what his duty had driven him into doing against the girl he loved and her family rose in him, harder to bear. He endured a sensation as of physically stifling.

"Why, it's no trouble at all," said the girl gayly. "I'm only too glad. I didn't know whether you would want to see me or not. Well, Lieutenant Burton," she said, shaking her head. "I'm weak. I ought to have stood by you last night. I'm no account—I'm no account—that's it."

She busied herself setting the pot and cups on a little table.

"I haven't got Spartan firmness like the ladies of the North have. They wouldn't do what I did last night—give up your dispatches. They've got a sort of backbone I lack. Excuse the indelicacy of my saying so. I'm just naturally a no account puff of nothing. I'm trifling. That's what I am. I've—I've cried all night," she said, and searched his eyes with her own as if to read there a verdict that she feared to read. She dropped her eyes. I'm 'shamed to look you in the face at all."

Breaking an Engagement

I'd rather face a field battery than to see you," said Burton. His voice was hoarse.

"Lieutenant Burton," said the girl, "I know your feeling for me has gone like the raven of the ark, never to return. I've stepped in partly to break the engagement. You won't want to marry me now, I reckon."

Burton started toward her.

"I want to marry you now as I never did before," he said with ringing earnestness.

Agatha looked up at him in surprise and pleasure.

"I don't believe even a Southern gentleman would be as generous as you are. You certainly have got a right beautiful forgivin' nature."

And yet as Burton did not seek to draw nearer, but stood stolidly on one spot, she studied him further. Doubt came into her voice.

"But do you?—You're different somehow," she said softly.

"I feel the same," he said huskily.

"Can you really."

The strain of his false position was becoming unendurable. The big, old-fashioned clock fascinated Burton. He saw the minute hand moving mockingly toward four o'clock—four o'clock, when the supply train would meet the ambush and disaster was destined to fall on all that the girl before him cherished most—save himself, whom she loved and who had been chosen the very instrument to bring down disaster upon her.

He could only half-stupidly protest in monosyllables against her declaration of a life time's devotion to atone for what she fancied had been an injury to him.

"Aren't you going to touch the little breakfast?" she asked.

"No, thank you. I'm not hungry."

"You're not going to refuse—to refuse the first breakfast I ever cooked for you?"

'Oh, no—no," said Burton. His eyes flashed again at the clock. He came over to the table and sat down.

"It's right strange fo' me to be makin' toast fo' you at this hour of the morning, isn't it?" she laughed.

"Yes, it must be," said Burton, loutishly.

"It makes me kind of happy, yo' know," she laughed. "I've never been engaged befo'. She paused and looked at him. "I've never been engaged befo'," she continued. "I didn't think it would be like this. It's—it's very different."

"Is it?" said the tortured Burton. "What did you think it would be like?"

Torturing Animals To Assist Science

Is A Cruel Method to Follow, But It Has Saved Many Human Lives.

Prof. Pawlow, of Russia, was engaged for many years in experiment work, trying to learn the workings of digestion, especially the digestive glands.

He, with able assistants, operated upon dogs, cats, guinea pigs and other animals.

His methods were seemingly painful, but he gave to science a work which won the Nobel prize and made for him an undying fame.

Science penetrated the secrets of nature. Prof. Pawlow saw animals digest food. He analyzed juices from every part of the digestive canal and stomach under all conditions of digestion. He spent years of ceaseless study amid the howling and dying beasts, but he won, and science to-day looks upon him as a great man.

"To do a great right do a little wrong" Shakespeare said, and Prof. Pawlow obeyed this trite saying.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are prepared by the most scientific process. They are produced by modern appliances and meet the demand of 20th century chemistry.

They give man the means to correct his infirmities of stomach and digestive organs.

They enrich the blood, give nature the juices and fluids she lacks, stop the formation of noxious gases and the fermentation of food. They neutralize powerful acids and alkalies, which irritate and devour the stomach. They prevent and relieve bowel and intestinal trouble and soothe the nerves.

They should be used after every meal whether one has dyspepsia and stomach trouble or the stomach be naturally healthy. By their use one may eat at all hours and whatever one desires and they help the system digest or throw off such food. They are thoroughly meritorious, as their tremendous sale and popularity illustrate.

Every drug store has them for sale, price 50c per package. If you would like to test their merits free, send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail without cost. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

SAY TYLER IS TO GET $10,000 FOR HIS HEAD

Amherst Professor Reported to Have Contracted for Sale to Experts.

AMHERST, Sept. 30.—John Mason Tyler, professor of biology at Amherst, son of America's greatest Greek scholars and possessor of the finest shaped head in America, is reported to have contracted to sell his head for $10,000. Mrs. Tyler, his wife, is said to be much disturbed over the contract and to be making efforts to have it broken. The professor refuses to deny or affirm the report.

It is declared that famous autological experts secured the contract with Professor Tyler. His head, it is said, would be a great prize because of its wonderful brain development.

"I suppose this story may be the result of an experience I had years ago, when I was a student at Leipsic," Professor Tyler said, when asked about the report. "It was only a joke. One day an Austrian student and I were leaning over a table studying, with our heads close together, when one of the old professors entered the room. He stood looking at our heads for some time before we noticed him, and then said: 'You two fellows have the finest types of the square head and the long head I have ever seen. I wish you would leave them to me after you are dead.' We promised we would.

"The young Austrian's head was very square and large and mine was very long, so I suppose the pair of them did look rather odd there together. That is probably the way this story started."

"But is it true that you have sold the rights to your head after death for $10,000 and that Mrs. Tyler is seeking to break the contract?"

"I guess $10,000 would be a pretty good price for a dead man's head," replied the professor, "but I am not advertising mine for sale. As for the story, I will neither admit nor deny it."

Professor Tyler is probably the most popular man in Amherst. The students know him as "Tip" Tyler and he is one of the most genial and companionable of men, the toast of all loyal Amherst alumni.

His memory and wonderful storehouse of information is phenomenal, and it is said that "Tip" Tyler was never "stumped" by anyone.

His head is massive and the frontal and temporal bones bulge out broadly, it being a splendid type of head.

In no sense is it a "freak" head. Its very beauty is in its impressiveness—a perfect type of a great student's head.

IRISH LADS TO BE TAUGHT HERE

The Central Council of the Irish County Clubs put in operation plans for an educational bureau for the further education of the young Irish in America at a meeting held in Seaver Hall on Appleton street.

In addition to the forming of the educational bureau the meeting was occupied by the mapping out of a program for the Fall and Winter work.

PASTOR WANTS 'BAT' TO FIGHT FOR CHURCH

Harvest Days for Saloonkeepers Would Then Be Over, He Says.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—The transformation of "Battling" Nelson, the champion lightweight pugilist of the world, to a staid and steady Methodist, is the task set for itself by the Rock River Methodist Episcopal conference, now in session in this city.

The Rev. S. A. Dennis, pastor of the Methodist Church in Hegewisch, where "Bat" lives when at home, is the sponsor of the movement.

He astounded the temperance committee of the conference to-day by stating that the advent of the "Battler" in Hegewisch was sufficient to cause the abandonment of business by everybody except the thrifty saloon keepers, to whom Nelson is in the habit of tossing $100 bills as he passes, so that his friends may celebrate.

"If Battling Nelson were to become a Methodist," said Mr. Dennis, "every man, woman and child in Hegewisch would forthwith join the church. I have prayed unremittingly for the conversion of the Battler.

"I believe he is the most decent fellow who ever entered the prize-fighting business. Aside from his profession, Nelson is a good man. His instincts are good, and I hope that with the prayers of the conference he may be turned into the paths of righteousness."

LOWELL MAN DEAD AT 106.

LOWELL, Sept. 30.—John J. Morgan is dead at his home in this city, aged 106 years. He was born in county Leitrim, Ireland, in 1802, but did not come to America until he was forty-six years of age. He never wore glasses and was a reader until within a few days of his death.

Hammerstein's Daughter, Who Is Now Playing Here

Miss Stella Hammerstein.

IS BEAUTIFUL AND RICH, BUT DISAPPOINTED

Miss Hammerstein, Daughter of Oscar, Wants to Sing in Grand Opera.

"Young, beautiful, immensely wealthy, Stella Hammerstein, nevertheless, is one of the most disappointed young women on the American stage.

Conspicuous even in so small a part as Edythe Yellowback in George M. Cohan's "The American Idea," at the Hollis Street Theatre, Miss Hammerstein has ambitions far above the mere play of the moment. Her heart's desire has been a career in grand opera.

One would say that the daughter of Oscar Hammerstein, the great American impresario, who moves his magic wand to see theatres and opera houses spring up about him, ought to find all things easy in grand opera.

Not Pining, However.

"And yet," Miss Hammerstein said today, "my father's throat specialist declares my vocal chords much too weak for really great music and from his decision, under papa's strict reasoning, there is absolutely no appeal."

"Oscar's" daughter will not pine in thought and with a green and yellow melancholy. She means to make the best of things. "Father," she says, "for all his love of art and music, is the most practical home and family man imaginable. 'Marry,' he says; 'there's the career for an American girl; there's "the American idea" for you. Leave the stage.'

"Marry!" Says Dad.

"Shall I take his advice? Well, that's a question! Seriously, when I think of all that might be mine if it had not been for the vocal chords the surgeon speaks of, I am reminded of some lines of your own Oliver Wendell Holmes:

"A few can touch the magic string,
And noisy Fame is proud to win them;
Alas for those that never sing,
But die with all their music in them."

"'Marry, and leave the stage!'"

Miss Hammerstein is a Junoesque blonde, with all her father's strenuous temperament. Friends in "The American Idea" privately express the belief that the young lady is about to take her father's advice.

HARRIMAN MAD, CALLS 'CORSET' STORY OUTRAGE

Admits He Did Have Stiff Spine Five Years Ago, But Is Cured Now.

ISSUES A STATEMENT

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—E. H. Harriman is highly indignant over a report that he has stiffening of the spine and wears corsets.

"It's an outrage," he said, refraining with difficulty from employing a shorter and uglier word, although the glint in his eye and the tone of his voice suggested that he would have no great aversion to putting a kink in the back of the author of the story if he knew his identity. Mr. Harriman was a his office in Broadway until late yesterday. In the forenoon he attended several directors' meetings, and for a man with a stiff spine displayed remarkable agility.

From his office the following explanation of the probable origin of the report of his spinal trouble was given out:

"Mr. Harriman went to a country fair in Vermont last week. On his way back he stopped at Groton, where he has a son at school. In Boston, en route to New York, he called on Dr. R. W. Lovett, who had treated him some five years ago for muscular rheumatism of the back. He wanted to show the doctor how he had improved. Somebody must have seen him enter the doctor's office, and hence the story. He is better now than he has been for five years and is justly proud of the fact.

"So far as corsets are concerned he has not worn them for about three years. He did have to wear a support made of linen and whalebone while he was suffering from rheumatism of the muscles of the back, but he discarded that after about two years and has experienced no need of it since. Many persons with muscular rheumatism wear similar things. There is nothing unusual in that. All this talk about stiffening of the back and adhesion of the cartilagenious surfaces which separate the vertebrae is the veriest rot."

GUN DROPS ON FLOOR; KILLS POLICEMAN

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 30.—Daniel J. Donovan, a reserve officer of the Springfield police force, was accidentally shot and killed while in the central police station at roll call. Myron H. Bullard, another officer, was preparing to go on duty and in putting his night stick and revolver into his pocket, dropped the latter, which on striking the floor, went off. The bullet entered Donovan's body in the abdomen. Donovan was at once taken to the hospital and he died after being there but twenty minutes.

COULD NOT CURE WEEPING ECZEMA

Disease Began over Ear and Spread till Face and Neck were Raw—Itching, Inflammation and Soreness were Terrible—Lasted Over a Year and All Treatments Failed

UNTIL CUTICURA AGAIN PROVED GREAT SUCCESS

"Eczema began over the top of my ear. It cracked and then began to spread. I had three different doctors and tried several things, but they did me no good. At last one side of my face and my neck clear up to my hair were raw. The water ran out of it so that I had to wear medicated cotton, and it was so inflamed and sore that I had to put a piece of cloth over my pillow to keep the water from it, and it would stain the cloth a sort of yellow. The eczema itched so that it seemed as though I could tear my face all to pieces. The disease began in the fall and I did everything for it until the next winter. Then I began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and it was not more than three months before it was all healed up. I still use the Cuticura Resolvent Pills once in a while to cleanse the blood. I am very thankful that I tried Cuticura, and I can recommend it to any one. Miss Ann Pearsons, Northfield, Vt., Dec. 19, '07."

Worse than ever. That is the condition of the diamond championship race, especially in the National League, where two teams are practically tied for first place and the third team is only four points away.

The Chicago Cubs have got back into first place at the head of the procession, but its position is very unstable, as there is less than a full point separating them from the Giants, who were forced off their pedestal and will have a hard time getting back. If the Cubs can clean up the four games coming with Cincinnati and lick the Pirates on Sunday they can claim the pennant no matter what the Giants do. Then that tie game with the Giants will come up and President Pulliam will have something more to say.

The change in the situation all came about by the Giants only getting an even break with the Phillies, and they have five more contests with the same team, which is not very favorable for them.

The Cubs only won one game, but that was good enough with the Giants' miscue to put them ahead.

The Pirates came up with a bound and are now crowding the Giants, taking a double-header from the Cardinals.

They have four more with the same team and should be able to win them, in which case it will be that game with the Cubs on Sunday to decide whether they will be tied for first place.

There was no alteration in the American League race, as Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago and St. Louis won double-headers and all jumped up together in the percentage.

Fast Lightweights Got an Even Break

MURPHY AND BALDWIN DRAW

Never did two little fighters strive more earnestly to sway a ring award their way than Matty Baldwin and Tommy Murphy of Harlem, the lightweight rivals, who battled twelve rounds at the Armory A. A. to a draw decision.

There was considerable dissention over the calling of a draw by Referee Dan Donnelly, and the house was about evenly divided over the merits displayed by the two ringsters. That a draw decision was favorable could not be denied, as two fast steppers never looked more even at the end of twelve rounds of boxing. If anything Baldwin had what shade there was, as he was facing matters from the outset and landing the most effective blows, but he lacked the speed that Murphy could show and received the only knockdown recorded in the combat.

He surely did not have the margin over Murphy he did when they met at Chelsea two years ago in a fifteen-round bout, and he failed to display the same grit in the closing rounds as he did earlier in the game. It was going to the finish that Murphy put on a spurt and exhibited flashes of his former whirlwind style of mitt slinging, and in the eleventh round caught Matty a left hook on the jaw which sent him on his back as if he had been hit with a club.

Matty applied barrels of body punishment, beginning in the opening round to fasten on solid wallops to Murphy's midsection, where he was supposed to be weak on account of his affliction of malaria fever, but he did not have the same success as in their last meeting, for Murphy was constantly on the jump and tying Matty up whenever they got clinched.

Matty Played for Body.

But he could not escape a lot of Matty's onslaughts, and took some heavy rippings on the kidneys and wind section that did not do him any good. Murphy's constant missing was a big surprise, as he often fell short in his leads, pulling back in order to get out of reach, and by his quickness avoided a lot of trouble, as he was covered up before Matty could slip one over.

He showed a better left hand than Matty, and counted periodically with double lefts, swelling Matty's lips up to twice their normal size by constant hard tapping, and showed especially in the exchanges when both cut loose, as he was able to beat Matty to the punch by his superior speed.

Baldwin's clever blocking was always in evidence, and he knocked down or brushed off many of Tommy's advances and countered him heavily with right hand chops to the head and left hooks to the body.

At the fighting game Baldwin had it on Tommy, and tried to do execution at close quarters, hammering the kidneys with his free hand till he was tied up completely by Murphy.

Going to the eighth round Baldwin appeared slightly in front, as he was on top in the effective work, barring the fourth and fifth, when Murphy let fly with both hands and stopped Matty with the rain of hot handouts. But it was Matty driving in every round, pushing Tommy back to the ropes and jolting hard to the body as long as he could loosen a hand.

In the ninth round Murphy acted a bit tired, as Baldwin kept slamming in left hooks to the wind, and he missed a vicious rip, Matty going to him before he could get straightened out. Matty continued his same tactics in the tenth, rushing Murphy all over the ring, and the Harlemite backed willingly in order to lessen the force of Matty's stiff jolts.

Murphy Scores Knockdown.

Baldwin appeared to cut out all caution in the last two rounds, going in after a decisive win, using his right on the head and left on the body till Murphy suddenly caught him with a stunning left hook on the point of the jaw as he was coming in and Matty measured his length, but he was not hurt any, as he was on his feet in an instant.

Murphy managed to do some snappy work with his left in the final round, with Matty still maintaining his forcing habit, but the New Yorker used better judgment in his measuring and influenced the referee to give him a draw.

Murphy was a ten to eight favorite when the boys entered the ring, but even money went begging when half the distance was covered. Both boys weighed in below 133 pounds and fought straight Queensberry rules.

Bill McKinnon, the Roxbury middleweight, found a tough foe in Jack Cunningham, of the U. S. S. Chester, the champion middleweight of the Navy who went eight rounds with him. McKinnon's strength alone won him the bout, as Cunningham broke even with him till he got a bit weary in his underpinning.

Willie Grupp, Murphy's sparring partner, won a close decision over Kid Mercier of Lawrence, who made his opponent take the full count in the sixth round. Grupp was lucky to get away with the big end.

TIE STILL UNBROKEN IN BAY STATE ROAD TEST

By J. C. KERRISON.

PLYMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 30.—A heavy frost lay on the ground when the competitors in the runoff of the Bay State endurance run started out from Intervale this morning bound Bostonward. The schedule was placed at eleven hours, and as things now look still another day will be necessary to determine a winner if such a thing is possible between so evenly matched as are these three cars—the Shawmut, Franklin and Studebaker.

The men are driving with excellent care and yet manage to keep well ahead of their schedules, all arriving here thirty minutes ahead of time and each with a perfect score. The roads are in perfect condition, much better than at any time since the contest started, and as they get nearer Boston they will continue to improve.

It is suggested that if the cars continue as they now stand that the contest devolve into a Boston-Madrid contest or else run to the North Pole. Still it is not to be expected that these three cars can run forever without one of them showing the hard effects of their abnormal treatment.

The first car is due to arrive in Boston at 5 o'clock this evening.

It is a most severe test on the cars, and equally so upon the men who are driving the same. In the run yesterday W. G. Jones again clung to the wheel of his Studebaker, driving it all the way from Boston to Poland Springs and then to Intervale. He says he will stick to his job to the finish unless he is taken off by illness. He is the only man left in the run who has driven every mile of the distance, the driving of the other cars being divided between C. S. Harris and J. Lafayette Burns on the air-cooled Franklin and between the Church brothers on the Shawmut.

The morning drive of yesterday, that from Boston to Poland, was an easy task, the schedule, eight hours, being a loaf, as the rain of the previous night had placed the roads in fine shape. It was in the afternoon that Harry W. Knights gave the men the scare and the narrowest escape of the run. He placed an 18 2-3-mile schedule in the run from Portland to Poland Springs, Naples, Fryeburg and Conway to Intervale. This course was pretty difficult, and, together with the schedule, kept all cars pretty busy and yet three cars arrived here twenty minutes ahead of schedule and close on the heels of the official car, the Packard kindly loaned the committee by C. H. Perkins.

The hardest portion of the trip was that between Bridgeton and Fryeburg, which was a narrow sandy winding road, full of ruts, with sand deep enough to cover the rims of the wheels. It was hard, cruel driving, and yet all came along in good shape, the air-cooled Franklin having no more trouble with her cooling system than did the water-cooled engines, and as Carris said, "We had no water to care for." Carris, in the Franklin, reached Portland first, while the Shawmut came into the night control first. Jones, in the Studebaker, seems content to finish in third place at each control.

RED SOX STOP OFF FOR GAME

GREENBURG, Pa., Sept. 30.—It was a regular Fourth of July Holiday in this little burg to-day when the Boston American baseball team came along, stopping off on its way to Philadelphia to continue its warfare with the Athletics, and the people turned out enmasse to greet the great team representing the Hub.

The team left Chicago at 8 o'clock last night after being beaten by the White Sox in a double-header and the citizens were afraid that they would be looking for revenge on their club when they lined up this afternoon.

The Elks team here is considered pretty strong for surrounding towns, and when they go up against the big leaguers, if they don't get stage fright, may spring a surprise.

Doc Gessler got a big ovation, as he is a popular idol here, and is likely to have a bouquet thrown at him when the exhibition is on.

NELSON ASKS ONLY $10,000 AS GUARANTEE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30.—There will be no Battling Nelson-Freddie Welsh fight —not just yet awhile. Nelson demanded a guarantee and the Jeffries Athletic Club replied by pledging the Dane $4,000 for his share. Nelson came back with "Go get another pill and smoke up. I refused $10,000 for six rounds with McFarland. Meet this offer and I'll consider it."

Harry Gilmore, Jr., telegraphed stating that if allowed a bonus he would sign up for McFarland to meet Welsh here Thanksgiving Day. The answer to this message must have sent Gilmore's goat on a wild ramble down Michigan avenue. It reads: "Welsh claims to be a bigger card in Los Angeles than McFarland. If you will concede Welsh a five per cent. bonus we will stop negotiations with Nelson and declare the Welsh-McFarland on immediately."

LOCUST JACK'S GOOD CAMPAIGN

If there is one good horse in the whole Grand Circuit outfit that has thrived in hard work it is Locust Jack (2:07¼). At Kalamazoo he had not shown his form, and was apparently so sore in his tendons that many shook their heads dubiously when they forecasted his campaign down the big line.

But now, after racing like a bulldog from Detroit to Columbus, driving out Hamburg Belle, Margaret O., and lots of other good horses, he looks, acts and goes better than ever. His present condition, for he is fat as a seal and sounder than ever, is certainly very much to the credit of Myron McHenry, in whose hands he has made the season's campaign.

HALF-MILE TRACK STARS.

Elexis, 2:09¼; Ardelle, 2:04¼; Hal Chaffin, 2:05¼; Aileen Wilson, 2:03¼; Kingmore, 2:06¼; Dick O'Donnell, 2:08¼; Beaut Kennedy, 2:10¼; Raoul W., 2:10¼; Arthur J., 2:07¼, and King Direct are a few of the fast pacers that have been racing over half-mile tracks this season.

DE RYDER SHIPS HIS HORSES TO CALIFORNIA

Charley De Ryder has shipped his stable home to Pleasanton, Cal., from Sioux City, Ia., after a rather unsatisfactory season—due, largely, so he thinks, to his shipping his horses by the northern route and undertaking to race them in North Dakota in June and July, where it was extremely cool and damp.

The climatic conditions were so extremely different between California and North Dakota at that time that it seems but natural that his horses must have been considerably affected. The alkaline water in North Dakota is also trying on horses unaccustomed to it.

But there was one feature of De Ryder's trip that was quite pleasing to him. That is that his horses all remained sound and uninjured. About the only lameness in his stable was that of the veteran pacer, Argot Boy 2:03¼, which was of little consequence. Charley T. 2:11¼ and Sherlock Holmes, p., 2:06 should both be good race horses another season and so should the trotting gelding Diablo Me 2:20½, for that trio looked particularly good during the last few weeks, which De Ryder spent in the middle West.

FAST AQUILIN COLTS.

Aquilin colts are showing up. Aquilin now has a four-year-old mark of 2:08½. McQuillan, 3, was timed in a race in 2:15½, last half in 1:05¼; a two-year-old has traveled a mile in 2:18, last half in 1:06¼, and one of the fastest colts in Virginia is Akar, mile in 2:15½, last half in 1:05¼. With only fifteen foals old enough to hitch, this is a great showing.

NO "EASY" MONEY.

A well-known Massachusetts driver stood by the rail at a recent Maine fair, saw them cracking in heats in fourteen, fifteen and sixteen, waved his hand sadly toward the Western horizon and sadly muttered, "Never again!" "The boundaries of the easy money territory are as vague and hard to establish as that mythical term 'Down East.'"

HAS SPEED AND IS GAME.

One of the handsomest horses of the long line of beautiful animals which have graced the turf is Gratt, 2:02¼, by Grattan, 2:13. With his great beauty he combines the two qualities most eagerly sought by breeders, viz., speed and gameness.

PICK MORAN TO DEFEAT ED HANLON

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 30.—Owen Moran, the English featherweight, is still a favorite over Eddie Hanlon for their bout here tonight at odds of 10 to 8.

The battle is scheduled to go twenty rounds, but the lad from British soil is confident that he will drop the local scrapper long before the limit is reached.

Hanlon says that he is in the greatest condition of his career, and believes that he will knock out the Englishman. Hanlon saw Moran in both of his contests against Attell and he sized him up as a clever lad with his mitts, but lacking the knockout wallop.

Hanlon declares that even if Moran does land on him, there won't be enough force in his blows to do any serious damage, and he will bide his time, waiting for a good opening, when he will cross over the sleep punch.

JACK TWIN ON WAY EAST.

NAPS' HOODOO STAYS AWAY FROM GAMES

CLEVELAND, Sept. 30.—Persons hastening to the ball park the last few days have wondered at the sad-eyed man who sits on the steps of Dunham School.

He frequently crosses the street, and when he does a boy sticks his head over the fence and yells the score at the mysterious man.

To relieve the curiosity of the fans who have seen him, let it be said that the man is an ardent fan—perhaps the most ardent and self-sacrificing fan in Cleveland. It would not do to tell his name. He lives in the East End.

He loves base ball. He used to go to the game every chance he got. Earlier this season he noticed that every time he went to a game the Naps lost. Fear became conviction as the season advanced. Whenever he went the Naps lost. He grew to believe that he was a hoodoo. When he stayed away, the Naps won.

When the present series opened, he decided to make a supreme sacrifice. Although it broke his heart, he decided to stay away from the games.

But every day he can he goes to the park, picks out a youngster and pays his way in. Then he sits down on the school steps. He judges by the yells how the game is going. At the end of each inning he walks over to the fence and gets a detailed report from the boy.

MORE HORSES THAN EVER.

The government has been taking a census of the horses of the country and reports that there are more than 20,000,000 horses and nearly 4,000,000 mules in the United States. This is a greater number of horses by several hundred thousand than were before reported and indicates that the notion that we are about entering upon a horseless age is not justified by the returns.

SULLIVAN TO BE BACK SOON

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Catcher "Billy" Sullivan of the White Sox will be able to catch in the world's series games if the Sox can land the bunting in their league.

The Sox catcher is responsible for this statement. He came into the press box during the first game of the Chicago-New York series.

"I'll be all right for the world's series if the Sox can only cop," said the catcher. His thumb was bandaged and wrapped until it was three times the normal size. "The thumb isn't as badly hurt as it was two years ago. This time the cut is just below the joint. The physicians inform me that I will be out of the game about ten or twelve days."

TRACK RECORDS LOWERED.

Vermont has seen her State record twice dropped by Judex and Jennie W. The Maine tracks have been slashing previous best marks, and there is time yet for other reductions, for Topsham, Me., fair always closes with the first snowstorm of the season.

PIANOS AND ORGANS.

PIANOS NOW COMING IN FROM SWELL SUMMER RESORTS
To Be Sold at Less Than Cost

WE HAVE almost 100 of the finest pianos in America on sale this week at sacrifice—About 75 of them are the Piano Trust's finest products—They were new June 1st, and have only been slightly used. We have put them in first-class condition and guarantee them to be as good as new, and being Piano Trust instruments, we take great pleasure in cutting and double cutting the price. When the representative of any piano house, especially a house in the Piano Trust, tells you not to come to us for a piano, he does so with the fear in his heart that you will see on our sacrifice floor, when you do come, the same make new piano that he has tried to sell you, marked with our sacrifice tag at a price from $100 to $150 less than he asked. See us on any make piano, new or second-hand, get our price, that's all we ask. We buy pianos for spot cash anywhere.

$5 Down—$1 a Week. The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

DON'T BE A READY-MADE MAN
GEORGE'S, 14 Summer St., Boston. GEORGE'S, 759 W. 34th St., New York. GEORGE'S, 101 S. 15th St., Phila., Pa.
CLOTHING OF MANY KINDS THE BEST—CUSTOM MADE AT GEORGE'S.
Even good cloth when slighted in the workmanship, means poor clothing. This is why ready made is not to be trusted. The cost of making is stinted down and garments which look well at first, soon lose their shapeliness. As our success depends upon keeping every promise, every misfit and uncalled for garment we receive from the tailors must show high-class workmanship or we refuse them. The garments at $15, $16, $18 and $20 are in many respects as well made as are those for which we ask $25 to $35. Here are two illustrations: Sack suit, olive gray, a beautiful shade, coat 3-button dip front, the latest model, custom made for $45 by a well-known Boston tailor, our price $16. Medium weight overcoat, the new shade, wood brown, very serviceable, custom made by a noted tailor of Broadway, N. Y., for $40, our price $15. Over 2,500 other garments, including Prince Alberts, walking suits, full dress and Tuxedo suits and cravenettes. GEORGE'S TAILOR PARLORS, 14 Summer street, near Washington. Open Saturday night. See windows. Judge us by what they reveal.

Come Good News or Bad—

The World's Great Work Goes On. THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS ARE OPEN

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Some of us talk politics, others business, others poverty and idleness. There is a good deal of bad news in the air, a good deal of depression.

The opening of the public schools, now well under way, reminds us of one thing that must cheer the mind of any man interested in human progress— education at last is plentiful and free.

Many children are hungry, many women are overworked, many are killed by worry and poverty. Many men struggle through lives of anxiety.

But at least we have made one forward step, EDUCATION IS FREE TO ALL, and the MIND of the child at least has a chance. And education in time will solve all problems.

In the city of Boston alone there are 110,000 children in the public schools. Boston now ranks fourth for school attendance in America.

But a few decades ago and a great majority of these children would have gone through their lives ignorant, unable even to read, dependent for their mental food upon casual, dull conversation around them, shut out forever from the wonderful treasures of the intellect locked up in books.

NOW ALL THESE PUBLIC SCHOOL CHILDREN ARE TAUGHT, and they are kept away from the factories and the mills, and sent to the public school.

The world DOES move, there is progress. Civilized humanity can no longer tolerate a starved MIND. It is reasonable to hope that our next step will be horror at the thought of a starved body.

Before long the richest country in the world will add to its statement, "No child's mind shall be empty," the further statement, "NO CHILD'S STOMACH SHALL BE EMPTY."

We are progressing gradually toward civilization, and our public schools prove it. They are glorious, democratic institutions, where knowledge is free to all and the same for all. They are genuine little democracies in which merit wins, in which there is no rank or station acknowledged except rank based on industry and intelligence.

Parents who fail to send their children to public schools in this country, whether they be the richest or the poorest, TREAT THOSE CHILDREN MOST UNJUSTLY.

The public school makes the typical American. The TYPICAL American is to be the SUCCESSFUL American in this country. If you deprive your child of public school influence, you are depriving him of the best start in life.

Two Kinds of Women

By WINIFRED BLACK

I KNOW a woman who is envious, unkind, malicious and discontented.

She is a very clever woman and she ought to do great things in the world, but what she is gets in the way all the time, and nobody can look behind that to see some of the really kind things that she does.

I was talking to a friend of mine about this woman the other day.

"What on earth is the matter with her?" I said. "She seems to be out of sorts with the whole world; she hates her work, can't bear her home, and doesn't like anybody well enough to stand it to hear them praised."

"Oh, well, said my friend. "Poor thing, she's never had a chance; everything has been against her from the start, and she's embittered."

"What are some of the things that have been against her?" I said.

"Well, said my friend, "she was born red-headed, and not particularly pretty, and everybody teased her, and her father failed in business, and, oh, I don't know, she's never had anything she wanted since she was born."

And my friend who was talking is a woman born to riches and a high social position. She lost both and had to go out in the world and earn her own living. She is an invalid; she has a brother who ran away with another man's wife; her own husband deserted her and left her with two children to support; her mother is a cross, fretful, nagging old woman, and she's the only real companion my friend has in her home, and yet my friend is sweet-tempered, generous, amiable, kindly and is as easily grieved as a little child.

I'm afraid that my acquaintance is envious, malicious and discontented for the same reason that a pickle is sour.

She was made that way.

When she doesn't get the things she wants, I wonder why she doesn't set herself to wanting some of the things she gets.

The broadest minded, cleverest woman I know is the easiest to please.

She is as delighted over a pleasant ride in a trolley car as if she had never heard of an automobile.

The other day I met her and she fairly beamed.

"Look at what the little girl in the next block made for me at kindergarten," she said, and she was as pleased over the little cardboard box as if she didn't have a gorgeous jewel case of her own at home.

It isn't what happens to us that spoils life for us—it is what we are.

Let's try to be worth being happy.

Song of the Bucko Bark

By James J. Montague

THE bucko bark Democracy, she's made her port to-day;
She's layin' 'longside Archbold's dock, in Rockefeller Bay;
So yo, heave ho, you jolly lads, an' load her yawnin' hold
Clear down beyond the Plimpsoll line with yellow campaign gold;
Then put to sea
For old John D.
An' all his pirates bold,
An' head 'er for the White House in the mornin'.

OH, Mack is on the quarter dack, an' Ridder's at the wheel,
An' Daniel, like a barnacle, is clingin' to the keel;
And, oh, she made a v'yge of it, a beatin' up the blast,
But Haskell brought her into port, an' never strained a mast;
He sailed her through
Whatever blew
An' fetched her up at last
To H. H. Rogers's moorin' in the mornin'.

AN' down below the officers an' all the bloomin' crew
Are watchin' of the hatches when the gold comes rattlin' through;
They're singin' chants o' gratitude, in soft an' sweet accord;
They're sayin' that at last they've got their right and just reward;
But Haskell? Oh,
Why, Mack, you know,
He kicked HIM overboard!
They won't need Haskell any more this mornin'!

Little Editorials from the People

HAVE SUFFERED FOR 20 YEARS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Permit me to compliment your paper for the very able way in which you set forth the needs of the people of Revere, Beachmont and Lynn for the electrification of the Revere Beach and Lynn narrow gauge route. Beachmont, Revere and Lynn have suffered for twenty years by this road's inadequate service. It is far behind the times.

It is time people who live along this route were accorded at least first-class accommodations for a first-class fare. The road is old and the cars are unsanitary. This is a matter that should be pressed until something is done to relieve humanity. God bless the people's own paper that dares trusts and corporations.

"KEEP UP THE GOOD WORK"

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I cannot let this opportunity pass without congratulating you on your timely and able editorial of September 26, "A Weasel in a Corner." It was the best ever. Keep up the good work and stab a few more weasels between now and election day. Yours truly,

Lynn. T. SHANAHAN.

TO WORKINGMEN

Better One Watch-Dog of Your Own Than a Pack of Borrowed Hounds

By CHARLES FERGUSON

SOME people who wish you well—and some who wish you well out of their way—advise you to vote for Mr. Bryan and the Democratic ticket because of that curious, ambiguous, pro-anti-junction plank in the Denver platform.

They tell you that a chickadee in hand is worth a double eagle in the bank; that every fog contains a possible rainbow; that all things come to him who waits an eon or two—and above all that you mustn't "lose your vote" by giving it to a minority party.

The people who talk to you in this manner are either ignorant and unobserving in politics, or else, if you look close, you will see that they have their tongues in their cheeks.

The truth is, in politics as in natural philosophy, that mass is only one factor in the striking force of a movement. The other factor is momentum. A small body that is "going some" may strike harder than a drifting ship; and it is more inconvenient to one's enemy to hit him with a Mauser bullet than with a moving house.

Power in a Fighting Minority.

If you had six men in Congress who thoroughly understood the labor movement, believed in it and were determined to rise early and stay up late to impress upon the legislation of the country the demands of that movement, those six-men would have a far greater projectile power, a far more penetrative and shattering striking force against the armor of privilege than any Democratic or Republican congressional majority has ever shown.

This is indeed a feeble and shriveled understatement of the case. The fact is that a compact congressional party of six whole-hearted men, with your great cause flaming in their minds, would let light through the closed doors of congressional committee rooms like a candle shot out of a gun.

If you would win your fight you must quit trading irresistible momentum for sluggish mass. Even if the Democrats should "sweep the country," which is highly improbable, though Heaven knows that the country sorely needs sweeping by somebody, and then even if the "organized appetite," which is the Democratic machine, should religiously remember, with its paws in the plate, not to pick the meat off that poor little pro-anti-injunction bone with the rest—even so, the striking force enlisted in your favor would be about as formidable to your adversaries as the fierce upgrowing of the wild flowers in the Spring.

Two Men Killed the Corn Laws.

"Good causes are won not by thos who make grudging concessions to them, but by those who fight for them.

When bread was dear in England, and the people starved, two men—John Bright and Richard Cobden—standing almost alone in the face of a great array of political powers, struck hands one day and said to each other: "We will g up and down the land together, and w will not rest day or night until the cor laws are repealed!"

They were repealed, all right.

Don't vote with those who handed y out a poor silver of a plank because M Gompers pleaded extra hard at Denver vote for the party that comes fresh int the field, alive with the energy of you convictions—the party that has bee born out of a brilliant record of u capitulating battles, fought by the work ers of society against the beggars, gan blers and grafters—the party whos labor planks you framed yourselves by the hands of a hundred union delegates, and made them as long and broad as you cared to make them.

In every country of Western Europ the cause of labor is better cared for than it is in the United States. The reason is that in the Parliaments Europe that cause is committed to charge of compact minority parties t really represent the workingmen.

In the English Parliament, for ample, there are thirty representatives the labor party out of a total membe ship of 670. That party has been in e istence for only about seven years; y it has already created a new era f labor. Year before last it drove throug Parliament the Trades Dispute ac which broke the force of the infamou Taff-Vale decision, by which trade unions had been virtually outlawed.

Labor Victories in England.

The new English Labor party has p the writ of injunction in labor disput completely out of business. It has undeed taken vigorous measures for the relief o the unemployed, has seen to it that meals are provided in public schools for hungr children.

It has nearly accomplished legislatio that will give old-age pensions to all th scarred veterans of the army of industr and its future opens up a vista of en less possibility in the way of humanizin the conditions of ordinary life.

The point is that the Independence party, like the minority party of Europe is already a hard hitter for liberty, equality and opportunity. Put your votes into it and it will hit harder. Some day it will be a majority party. Meanwhile it will continue to deliver the goods.
